The Down Factory Store

www.downfactorystore.com

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breathe, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your comforter longer than the car you are now driving.

Mets 3 Braves 2 At Shea; Maidstoners 14 All Stars 12 In Amagansett

By Dan Rattiner

During this past week here on the East End, there were all sorts of vigils, fundraisers, memorial services and funerals, all relating to the terrorist attack that knocked down the Twin Towers two weeks ago. Our volunteer firemen and some of our policemen went on rotation, as one after another, those at Ground Zero sent the word out that assistance would be needed. Almost all our firemen, one department at a time, took a twelve hour shift manning the floodlights at Ground Zero, backing up those directly involved in the rescue effort.

In the middle of all of this, there was baseball. It was like a tonic to lift our spirits over the weekend. Two games.

One, a celebrity softball game, held on Saturday afternoon on the sandlot field on Abraham's Path in Amagansett, was put together by Dawn Zimmerman, the founder of the Child Development Center. It drew, among other celebrities, singer Jimmy Buffet of North Haven and actors Alec Baldwin and Roy Scheider of Amagansett and Bridgehampton respectively. It wasn't the Mets, but people rallied to it, arriving at the ballfield around noon for batting practice in anticipation of the start of the game at one. This reporter was among those arriving at that time.

That ballfield underwent a wonderful transformation during the first hour. At noon, the field was quiet. But beginning at that hour, cars and truckloads of people began to arrive with food, flags, helium

Hampton Fire Department and came from restaurants such as Michael's, O'Malley's, Mt. Fuji, Estia, Cafe on Main, Stephen Talkhouse, Bostwick's, Jessie's Bake Shop, Brent's General Store, the Old Stone Market and numerous private kitchens. There was a keg of beer, a barbecue grill for hotdogs. And the restaurants brought ziti, lobster dishes, sushi, chicken teriyaki, soup. There were also two tubs filled with ice and cold drinks.

The game itself promised to be an unbalanced affair. This was, in fact, the 4th Annual Maidstoners Softball Challenge, which in prior years had benefited other charities, including the Child Development Center.

The Maidstoners are a group of local men who have played together for ten years, usually beating all comers. In the past four years, they have twice traveled to Cuba where they have set up camp in Havana for a week and taken on all comers there. Baseball is a big deal in Cuba. They didn't do quite as well down there as they do up here, but they won their share.

The "Softball Challenge" therefore was a game between the Maidstoners, with their black t-shirts with the green lettering against whoever it was that balloons, a sound system and a music system, banners and bunting. These were placed and hung all around. The players arrived during this time, and the pitchers pitched and the batters lazily shagged balls out to left and center field as rock and roll played. The place was a festive occasion by game time.

The charity would be the New York State World Trade Center Relief Fund. The food, arriving as hot or cold covered dishes, was set up behind the home plate backstop on banquet tables from the East

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

This column should not begin without first reminding us all, as citizens of this wonderful country, that our assistance is needed every day to help The Red Cross with blood, money and product donations. As of last week we were painfully told it will take six months to clean the debris from the World Trade Center disaster site (and this is in a non-stop work mode), so pick up the phone right now and donate. Call 631-924-6700. God Bless this effort.

In reading the overwhelming articles from all sorts of periodicals we have learned some things about our entertainment industry and what they are doing in their own way to help.

Last Friday evening our biggest stars turned out for a live broadcast entitled "America: A Tribute to Heroes." This took an enormous amount of skill to pull off in such a short time, considering logistics and personal schedules. Well, no one cared about any personal schedules. To watch this epic undertaking was difficult as all the entertainers were so visibly moved and all shared a haunted look in their eyes that was also reflected in their choices of music and speeches. A few of our summer residents were there, including Tom Cruise, Kelsey Grammer, Billy Joel, Tom Petty and Paul Simon. The Hollywood West crowd included Julia Roberts, Tom Hanks, Robert DeNiro, Will Smith, Robin Williams, Stevie Wonder and Neil Young.

Some members of the Creative Coalition (and these neighbors out here) unceremoniously turned up at the Jacob Javits Center to talk with volunteers and rescue workers. They included Billy Baldwin, Chevy Chase and Bianca Jagger. This was, in our opinion, an important thing to do. It gave weary volunteers and rescue workers an opportunity to perhaps forget their troubles for a minute and feel special about what they were doing.

At Ground Zero many stars have been giving just this type of support and they have included Sarah Jessica Parker, Matthew Broderick, and Steve Buscemi. Restaurateur Drew Nieporent of the Tribeca Grill has been supplying hot meals and the likes of Harvey Weinstein, Tina Brown and Brad Epstein are the delivery team to the site. The one that is making the firefighters and cops smile is Sarah. Good job guys.

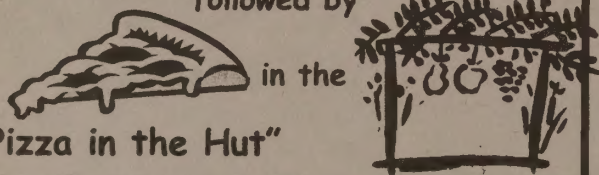

As business must carry on, if not only to show the world nothing can stop us, so it was for the fashion industry, and Fashion Week in New York came off a week after the cancellation of the scheduled show. Hamptonites Donna Karan, Bill Blass and Ralph Lauren conducted the runway shows in a professional, business like manner and references to the Trade Center and Dawn Zimmerman and her staff got on the phone to invite. They included, besides the above celebrities, local singer Nancy Atlas, painter John Alexander, a bouncy girl with a house out here called Kimmi, as in "Kimmi from Survivor," East Hampton Town Supervisor Jay Schneiderman, Town Councilman Job Potter and me. I've umpired games but haven't played a game in years.

"You're starting at second base, batting fifth," I was told.

We didn't have a chance.

The time leading up to the start of the game was an emotional one. The Chief of the Town Police, Randi Sarris, arrived in full uniform with a chest of medals, as did Police Lieutenant Kevin Sarlo and several policemen from the Critical Incidence Team who accompanied him. The Chief would be catching the first ball to start the game, which would be thrown by Amagansett Fire Chief Kent Howie, also in full uniform, accompanied by First Assistant Chief Dan Lester.

The ceremonies before this game started off with units of the East Hampton Boy Scout Troop and the Amagansett Girl Scout Troop, marching out onto the field, with flag bearers and performing a color guard ceremony. State Senator Kenneth LaValle spoke, as did school founder Dawn Zimmerman after which there was a moment of silence for the Trade Center victims. Then East Hampton High School senior Estee Maria Hadzikostas sang the National Anthem, Malorie Salaver and Reilly Tibbets sang America the Beautiful and Sheila Hopson sang Amazing Grace. After that, the Fire Chief threw out the first ball, the crowd of several hundred cheered, and the game began. And a fine, exciting afternoon was had by all.

As I expected, the All Star Team, which is the name they gave the "challenging" team I was on, was no match for the Maidstoners. Most of us hadn't even met one another until that day. Meanwhile, the Maidstoners played hard and fast and loose, familiar as they were with one another and with their abilities. There were, after a scoreless first inning, several later innings where I worried that if the Maidstoners hadn't eased up, us All Stars wouldn't even have been able to get anybody out. They were just hitting and circling the bases and generally having a good time at our expense.

Plays that stand out in my mind included an occasion, at home plate, where catcher Alec Baldwin, having seen that the long throw coming from the outfield would be far too late, simply tackled the baserunner and wrestled him to the ground until the ball arrived, which went behind him and into the backstop.

There was also some very artful pitching by Roy Scheider, and two towering home runs, both with nobody on, by All Stars Matt Dauch and Matt Sutz.

What I was personally struck by was the racial and ethnic, even religious diversity of all the Americans playing that day. As the announcer Peter Honerkamp, said over the PA system at one point, a ball had been thrown in from Left Field by someone with a Syrian heritage, relayed from the infield by someone from El Salvador and caught behind the plate by someone from Sagaponack. Americans, all.

Sodom and Gomorrah

Another Adventure Into Bin Laden's Interpretation Of The Holy Bible

By Dan Rattiner

For me, the beach is a peaceful place. No phone. No TV. No distractions. No worries. For the last two weeks, it surely has been an escape from the realities of what happened in New York City. A restful place to contemplate, write and observe.

On the Friday immediately after the attack on the Twin Towers, I drove down to Sagg Main Beach around 5:15 p.m., stopped in the parking lot to shift into 4-wheel drive, then continued slowly onto the sand and out as far as I could go, away from civilization.

I go to the beach quite a lot and keep a tide table in my car. I've been known to fall asleep on the beach. I also have a table of the sunrises and sunsets. You get the idea.

That day, the sun would set at 6:46, giving me an hour and a half of quiet and writing time. The tide was low about 3:15 p.m. It would be on its way in, but only beginning its way in. Furthermore, I would be writing in a chair on my laptop the whole time I was there. There was a gentle, rolling surf. No problem.

I had with me a bottle of water, a beach blanket, a beach umbrella, a black zipper bag for the laptop and a printout from an internet search about Sodom and Gomorrah. Muslims believe in the Old Testament. Perhaps this passage in Genesis would shed wife does look back and is turned into a pillar of salt. And that's the story.

But there are nuances. Very interesting ones. For example, it is not man, but God himself, who goes to these cities and, because of their evil ways, makes the decision to destroy them. Indeed, it is a man, Abraham, who succeeds for awhile in talking God out of doing it.

"Would you destroy the righteous with the wicked?" he asks God. "If you find fifty righteous people within the city would you destroy the righteous with the wicked?"

"If I find fifty righteous men," God says, "I will spare the cities."

Abraham asks how about forty five? And God agrees to spare the cities if there are forty five good men. Abraham asks forty. Then thirty five. The bargaining is right there in Genesis 18. God agrees to go and see for himself and if there are even ten good people he will spare the cities.

In Genesis 19, God sends two angels to Sodom and Gomorrah to destroy them. The angels arrive at the home of Lot, his wife and two daughters the some light on what goes on in the mind of a murderous individual named Osama Bin Laden. I settled in.

We all know the story of Sodom and Gomorrah. The Lord decides to destroy the city because of its sinful ways. Lot is a good man. The Lord escorts him to safety before setting fire to the cities. And he tells him not to look back, probably because — and this is interpretation — watching the fire, enjoying the suffering of others, would be a sin. Lot's night before and Lot invites them in for an evening meal, to wash their feet and to stay for the night. The angels refuse at first, then, at Lot's insistence, give in.

Before they go to sleep, though, a huge crowd of men comprising all the men of Sodom surround Lot's house and demand that he give the strangers over to them. Lot goes out to talk to the men of Sodom.

Here is what Lot tells them. It is Genesis 19:8.

"Behold now, I have two daughters who have not known man. Let me, I pray you, bring them out unto you, and do ye to them as is good in your eyes: only unto these men do nothing; for therefore came they under the shadow of my roof."

Now the way I look at it, this statement would be grounds for destroying Lot and all these men and saving all the women. What happens, though, is that the angels decide Lot is the only righteous man there, they reach out the front door, grab Lot and bring him into the house to safety, then smite the angry mob at the door with blindness. The men, blind for the first time, run off in confusion.

After this, Lot, his wife and two daughters are escorted out of the house by the angels with the instruction not to look back. The angels tell them to escape to the mountains. Lot, at this point, is very upset. He talks to the Lord saying that he is very appreciative that the Lord's emissaries had found Grace in him and had saved his family but he is afraid to go to the mountains because some evil might take him and he'll die. He then requests permission to go to a small town called Zo'ar.

"Behold now, this city is near to flee unto, and it is a little one; O, let me escape Thither (is it not a little one?) and my soul shall live."

God grants his request, Lot and his family go there, the angels disappear, and with Lot safely in Zo'ar, God rains brimstone and fire on Sodom and Gomorrah.

Lot and his family live a long time in Zo'ar, until finally, when he is old, they move up to the mountains and live in a cave where his daughters, noting they never bore children and since there are no more men around, decide to give their father too much wine, and while he sleeps lay with him "to preserve the seed of our father." One at a time they do this without waking him and they bear children they name Moab and Ben-am'mi who subsequently found two tribes known as the Boabites and the Ammonites to this day.

And that's the story. It's right there in the Bible.

A few points should be noted.

God will not kill good people. And he doesn't.

God does not get people to destroy the bad cities by promising them, in exchange, a ticket to heaven.

And we are not Sodom and Gomorrah. In America, we believe in the Ten Commandments, Freedom of Worship, Democracy, respect for our neighbors. We run things by the rule of law, not the rule of lynch mobs, which seem to be the case in Sodom and Gomorrah. Is bin Laden's problem that we don't worship God in the same way he does?

I've been sitting here on the beach, writing this, for nearly an hour and a half. Lovers, arm in arm, have walked by. Off in the distance, beyond the surf, you can see the curvature of the earth and during this time the earth has turned a few degrees. It's turned away from the sun. The sun is now low on the horizon over the dune behind me.

From where I sit, perhaps there is a sin of Western Civilization, the sin of not cleaning up the planet after we mess it up. Oh, in certain ways, we are now recycling a whole lot of things. But because of other things we do, the atmosphere is getting gunked up and the temperature is rising and we need to address this issue and we are not.

Bin Laden lives in a cave and leads a simple life, or so it might seem. But from the pictures I have seen and from what I have read, the simplicity does not seem to extend to drug smuggling, surface to air missiles, machine guns and money laundering. His problem does not seem to be environmentalism.

I think that bin Laden and his henchmen, who are murdering fellow Muslims as well as everybody else, should, when caught, not be put to death. They should be put in deep, dark, miserable prisons for the rest of their lives, so in their skewed thinking, they can see for themselves an all-knowing God deciding who are the evil-doers and who are the righteous.

It's the least we can do for the bin Laden gang.

It also might spur us to do more things to straighten, clean and polish up the planet, not just for us but for all living things.

I started packing up. I folded the beach chair, gathered up the bottle of water, and was reaching down to pick up the computer case when a low wave broke on the beach and gently rolled in and soaked my blanket, shoes, socks and beach umbrella. It spared the passage from the Bible.

A good sign.

"Lot and his daughters"

A Focused President With A Grand Plan. An Extraordinary Mayor

By Dan Rattiner

George W. Bush has been criticized, probably with some accuracy, for not being the smartest man to be elected to the Presidency. But in these last three terrible weeks, I think there are three aspects of his personality that have served him well. One is that he has surrounded himself with excellent advisors. Two is that he has not been afraid to make decisions. And three and perhaps most important, he has proceeded single-mindedly toward his goal with a determination that is simply extraordinary.

This third trait appeared for the first time to this observer during the election when, it seemed, he simply willed himself President. The results had come in. It was a statistical tie. And everything depended upon Florida, which also seemed to be tied.

There was that famous phone call. Al Gore spoke to him and said that neither ought to concede to the other until things got sorted out.

"Why is that?" Bush said. "My brother assures me that we have got Florida."

"Your brother is not who determines who gets to be the next President of the United States," Gore flashed.

And then there was the political maneuvering about how Florida should be handled. It was a chess match. Bush, with better advisors, won easily. Everything he did was directed toward that goal. Gore, it seemed, made numerous tactical blunders, frequently getting bogged down in the details.

I should note at this point that I voted for Al Gore. And for awhile there, I really thought Bush stole Florida. But in the end, when it was all over and teams of reporters went down there from various networks and respected daily papers to recount all the votes, it turned out, and the reporters had to grudgingly report it, that Bush did win. You could cut it various ways. But any way you counted the ballots, the result was the same. Bush had been right.

They say George Bush is running the country attention.

In the early going, and this could change before you read this, it has sent the government of Afghanistan streaming out of the capitol of Kabul — something no Russian action could do — and it has caused Yassir Arafat to instruct his men not to shoot back even if fired upon because,

"terrorism has gone on long enough and it is time we made peace." In return, the Israelis called off all military action against the Palestinians.

I'm not sure, at this juncture, if Bush can even guess at the various cards that will be played as time goes on. But he has set a goal, and like another leader, football coach Vince Lombardi, he will refuse to take no for an answer until the game is won. Indeed, Lombardi once said he had never lost a game. Time had run out while they were still behind, he said. But lose? Never.

I wonder how Al Gore would have done in this situation, had he been elected. He waffled numerous times during the campaign. I recall him taking one position regarding the Elian crisis — supporting the Miami Cubans — and then doing a full about face later on.

We have a courageous, determined, goal-oriented President who is not afraid to make decisions, who is comfortable with his shortcomings and who is willing to rely heavily on strong advisors who suggest he stop going down one path and try another.

in the same manner a businessman runs a large corporation. There is discussion at the top, a decision, then with a clear goal everyone gets busy to make it happen. Not everything will work. They'll try one thing and then another. But it's all directed toward the goal. This contrasts sharply with highly political Presidents we have had. They discuss things with their advisors, send out a signal, test the waters, horse trade if necessary, backtrack and compromise.

Bush has set as his goal the eradication of terrorism on the planet. The way this is to be done is by every means at his command, from forcing governments to choose sides to military assault. Probably the most telling thing he has said, that most sticks in my mind, is the sentence, "we will make no distinction between those who do these despicable acts and those who harbor those who do these despicable acts." This has gotten everybody's Sixteen racing cars piled into one another at the start of the last race of the day at the Bridgehampton Race Circuit on Sunday. No one was injured, but it was a spectacular ending to the weekend's racing, and it resulted in the cancellation of this final race, an event for 30 Formula Ford racing cars.

About thirty minutes went by before officials could remove all the debris from the field. And at an estimated $1,500 worth of damage to each of the cars, the accident probably cost about $22,000 in repairs in just two seconds.

The accident occurred as the drivers were still at slow speed and just beginning the start of their sixteen-lap competition. Still in their "grid" one of the lead cars apparently skidded on an oil slick, turned sideways, and was run into by the car behind. Fourteen of the following twenty-eight cars were unable to brake in time and piled up as well. It was the largest number of cars ever involved in an accident at the track since the track was first opened in the 1950's. Thank goodness, nobody got hurt.

Earlier in the day, actor Paul Newman entered his Datsun 280ZX in a Production C race. Mr. Newman is a highly competent professional racing driver and has qualified for the national championship runoffs in his racing class for each of the past two years. This year, however, he was short a few points and would be unable to go to the championships unless he could win his race at Bridgehampton. Since his car is well prepared for racing, and since he is a fine driver, he thought he had a good crack at it.

Paul Newman, however, does not enter races as the ordinary auto mechanic or stockbroker enjoying his weekend hobby might. While the ordinary drivers worked on their cars in the pits, cleaning engine parts, checking tire pressures and dashboard gauges under a hot sun protected only, perhaps, by a large beach umbrella, Paul Newman rested himself up in a $100,000 air-conditioned motor home while a uniformed crew made the final inspections on his car. There were, perhaps, good reasons for this resting up business. Surrounding Newman's motor home, racing car and pit crew were about one hundred camera toting curiosity seekers who were at the race simply to get a glimpse of the famous movie star. When Newman emerged from his motor home, cool and rested, just minutes before the race began, he was followed by a large crowd as he walked down pit row where one of his crewmembers had already driven his car onto the grid. There, in a few minutes before the event began, he talked with Ken Slagle, a racing driver from Wellsville, Pennsylvania, and the man he would have to beat. Slagle looked hot and sweaty as he climbed into his TR-8 on the pole position. Newman looked every bit the movie star as he slid into his Datsun in the second position directly alongside. Half a dozen other cars made up the balance of the race grid behind.

At the very start of the race, a driving start, Slagle simply outdragged Newman to the first turn. There, in a spine tingling maneuver, he went through the turn without even applying his brakes, emerging onto the back straightaway with a two-second lead. From there, Slagle simply pulled away and at the finish line was ahead of Newman by a little more than nine seconds. Paul Newman would not get his points. And he would not be qualifying for the national championship in Atlanta later this fall.

In another event, Mike Andretti, who is the 19-year-old son of Mario Andretti, was unable to finish his Formula Ford competition. On the sixth lap of that race, Andretti's Van Diemen 81 racing car ruptured a fuel line and coasted to a halt. He was finished for the day.

Mario Andretti didn't make out so good either yesterday. Off in Europe, he was forced out of the Italian Grand Prix with motor trouble with just twelve laps remaining.

A colorful crowd enjoyed the hot, dusty afternoon of racing at the Bridge. SAVE THE BRIDGE signs were everywhere, and everyone had a fine time.

Rebuild It

Taller, Stronger And With 300 Memorials Says The Man Who Built It

By Dan Rattiner

According to those who know, the Twin Towers, together, weighed just under three hundred and fifty million tons. There were people who thought, when they fell taking the lives of thousands of civilians and hundreds rescue workers, that to remove all this would be a job beyond the scope of even the most diligent cleanup effort. What might be preferable, some said, was to leave the collapsed buildings where they were, cover them over with earth, and create a memorial park there on the site that would serve as a monument to those who had died and were buried beneath. The ground level of this park, because of the debris, would be about five stories above the ground level of the surrounding area, an elevated place that would have to be gotten to by elevator and stairs.

That is not how the city of New York, and it has been their decision, has chosen to deal with the situation. Instead, there is to remain nothing of what fell down. The debris is to be removed.

Dr. Brown... watched the destruction of the towers on television. He said his first thought was, "it's finally happened."

---

The bodies of the dead recovered and given proper burials. And so, twenty four hours a day, there are clean up crews on the site, with welding torches and steam shovels, with bulldozers and rescue dogs, and at night with great arc lights to turn night into day so they can see what they are doing.

Needless to say, there have been accidents and injuries. Men have fallen deep into holes. Bones have been broken. One of the things that the rescue workers have asked for has been portable X-ray machines so those injured can be evaluated right where they have fallen. The machines have been provided. So have food and medical supplies, boots and helmets, ladders and clothing in endless donations from around the Metropolitan area.

And so the work goes on. At the end of the first week, more than thirty million tons of debris had been removed. The remains of about three hundred people had been removed. At this rate, the clean up of this site will take approximately twelve weeks. By Christmas time, the firemen, policemen, debris removal people and other workmen, these incredible heroes, may finally and wearily be able to return home, their heartbreaking job completed. And we will be ready for what happens next.

What happens next seems to be the rebuilding of either an identical World Trade Center or one very much like it. That this is to happen is being agreed upon around the City and around the nation by a remarkable consensus. As our President said, our nation, once aroused, is fierce. Those responsible will pay. And Western civilization will continue on, bigger and stronger than before. And that means replacing the World Trade Center, as was, or much like it.

Interestingly, the man who supervised the building of the World Trade Center thirty-one years ago is still around. He is Hyman Brown, and today he is a professor of Civil Engineering at the University of Colorado at Boulder. Thirty-one years ago, he was the head supervisor for Tishman Realty and Construction, the firm that was selected as the main contractor for the project.

From Colorado, Dr. Brown told a reporter for The New York Times that he had watched the destruction of the towers on television. He said his first thought was, "it's finally happened."

Brown said that when he was working with the architect, Minoru Yamasaki, the thought had come to both of them that some day one of the towers might be hit by an airplane. Indeed, a small plane had crashed into the 84th floor of the Empire State Building in the late 1940s. It caused a fire and left a gaping hole but the building had stood and was soon afterwards repaired. What would happen if the largest plane of the day, a Boeing 707, were to hit one of the Twin Towers?

Yamasaki had designed each of the towers as a great steel tree. There was a massive steel core that housed the elevators and mechanical equipment, and then great steel branches, trusses, leading out to the skin of each building, behind which were more massive pillars from basement to roof to support the trusses. As for the skin itself, it consisted of stainless steel vertical tubes set just eighteen inches apart. There were glass panels between. In a sense, this skin was like a window screen, light and almost transparent. In fact, from a distance, the buildings looked as if they had no windows at all.

There was little doubt that a plane would pierce the skin. But there was a firm belief that no plane, even a 707, which is about half the size of a 767 today, could go through the core. The buildings would stand.

"The impact of the planes is not what brought the buildings down," Brown told the Times. "The planes were just a delivery system for the fuel. When you have 24,000 gallons of aviation fuel burning, sooner or later, it gets to a temperature that melts steel. It's just not possible to build a building to withstand that kind of heat."

Nevertheless, Dr. Brown said he was of the opinion that the towers should be rebuilt. And they should be built bigger and better than before, with at least one of them 140 stories high. On each of the additional 30 floors, he said, he would build 10 memorials to all those who died, 300 memorials in all, each memorial dedicated to the public but named after a New York Fireman or Policeman who died.

Brown had done some math. The total cost for a 140-story building should be about $4.5 billion at today's prices. The 30 memorial floors therefore would cost about $750 million, or about $2.67 per American.

"I think that would be the monument right for America," he said.

Mecox Cut

The Story Of The Little Pond That Couldn't Close Up It's Cut To The Sea

By Dan Rattiner

About fifty lucky families own mansions that sit waterfront on Mecox Bay. These are very desirable properties.

There is canoeing, sailing, clamming, even swimming if you don't mind the jellyfish and horseshoe crabs for company. And of course there is the view. The sun sparkles off the gentle waves that lap on the shore. What could be more peaceful than a little sloop, on a broad reach, gliding along?

Since June, and for the entire summer of 2001 up until this past week, all these families got to look out at was nothing but a huge one thousand acre patch of mud. Mud and flies and an occasional pop of bubbling goop. You couldn't swim in it, fish in it, sail or canoe on it and nothing these wealthy families could do — and many of them tried mightily to get the authorities to do something — could change any of that. Finally, after almost four months, nature just took its course.

"The pond water is almost eighteen inches deep in some spots," an official said hopefully last week, surveying what is still about half mud and half water.

The trouble started on June 6 when the Town Trustees dug a trench connecting the ocean with this body of water, which is actually, by definition, a pond. This is standard practice. A strip of beach only 50 yards wide separates the pond from the ocean. Occasionally, about four times a year, the Trustees dig this trench to open the pond to the sea. The pond, into which freshwater streams flow, has been rising for three months. There is a danger it could overflow its banks and flood various basements along the shore. It has to be let out. The Trustees do it.

Actually, the trouble started about three hundred carrying much of the fifty yard sand barrier with it. Then the pond would be very low and at high tide the ocean would wash in, giving the pond a brackish quality in which all manner of clams, eels, fish, crabs and other sea creatures could thrive. Meantime, the swampy area would dry up. Then the process would start all over again.

The Indians perspective on this was that it was really great just the way it was. You could catch lots to eat in the pond. There was more to eat in the swamp. Of course, nobody in his right mind ought to live there. It was far too unstable an area.

The white men's perspective on this was to look at it as a science project. If you got men with shovels down there every three months to artificially make the cut, you could dry out the swamp and in this fertile ground plant vegetables and potatoes. Along the shore of the pond, you could build houses. Waterfront. Almost oceanfront. And if you really got the science project going, nobody's basement would get flooded and you could live there forever. The Indians thought the white men were crazy.

But it worked. For the first hundred years, there were laws on the books punishing residents of the community if they failed to come down to help dig years ago when the English settlers in these parts decided to mess with Mother Nature for the first time. The settlers noticed what the Indians had noticed before them. Every three months, around Mecox Bay, the water would overflow, creating a great swampy area. Then, when it really got high, it would wash over into the sea, the force of it the cut when the time came. It was a huge job. The Town Trustees would organize the work crews. People who failed to participate were put in the stocks in the center of town and mocked by passersby for a day. It's right there in the early ordinance books.

Over the years, the means of opening the cut have changed. Now it is done with bulldozers and steam shovels. But the result is the same. And not only is Mecox let, but also Georgica and Sagg Ponds. They used to let Lake Agawam. But eighty years ago they put a big drainage pipe under the sand so the pond and the sea could just intermingle, high tide and low tide, whenever it wanted to.

There have been disagreements about the letting of a pond. Fifteen years ago, after the wealthy people around Georgica Pond appealed in vain for the Trustees to let the pond, a group of vigilantes, in the dark of night, went out and did it. The Trustees posted a reward for anyone who could lead them to these ordinance violators. But nobody ever turned anybody in.

Five years ago, President Clinton stayed at Steven Spielberg's house on Georgica Pond and two days before his arrival, mysteriously, the pond got let. There'd be no paparazzi out there in rowboats with long lens cameras trying to get photographs of the famous guest and his host. And nobody knew who did that either, though there were rumors it was the Secret Service.

Ordinarily, the level of the pond rises, the Trustees come and let it, the water drains out for five days, and then the pond heals.

On June 6, however, the Trustees let Mecox Bay, the water drained out, and it drained out and drained out and drained out. After three weeks, it was nothing but mud. And there were no summer storms to wash up tons of sand to heal the breach. And there was little rain. So for days and weeks and months the breach simply stayed open. And absolutely nothing could be done to change that.

Certainly the homeowners tried. They wanted the Trustees to get in there and bulldoze huge piles of sand over to the breach. The Trustees refused. The homeowners demanded tax relief. They had paid for waterfront homes and were being taxed accordingly. Mud front homes should be taxed less. The homeowners even appealed to the Army Corps of Engineers and the Department of Environmental Conservation. They were told, as the Indians might have told them three hundred years before, if you were crazy enough to build down there, then you have to suffer the consequences. Nobody is going to move a few thousand tons of sand around for you.

Finally, just this past week, as summer turned to fall, the twin hurricanes of Erin and Gabrielle, passing Long Island far out to sea, churned up enough sand to heal the breach at Mecox. So once again, the level of Mecox Bay, fed by its upland rivers, is rising.

That's the news this week, anyway.

Attempt To Send Serran-Pagan's Herd Out Of Town Leads Back To The Barn

By Dan Rattiner

In a stunning development in the case of Southampton Village versus its chickens, as some people call it, Judge Barbara Wilson last week threw out all the charges against Gines Serran-Pagan of North Main Street, Southampton, in what is becoming a case of national significance. Are there limits to the power of a local small, town Mayor?

The case began five years ago when Gines Serran-Pagan, a man of Italian extraction, moved into Southampton Village and brought with him several goats, chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys and some other farm animals. The resulting "farm," in the old farmhouse and barns of what had been a much larger farm years ago, became a delightful addition to the community, something called the Red Barn Atelier, which grade school children could visit with their teachers and which artists and art collectors could visit to see Serran-Pagan's art hung up on the barn walls. Serran-Pagan and his young son also lived there.

One of the four immediate neighbors of Serran-Pagan complained to the Mayor about the situation. Get rid of this thing, was the essence of this complaint. The other neighbors, Mr Aldrich and Henry Koeghler, Mrs. Wagner and Bill Koral, liked people came over to the Red Barn Atelier on approximately forty occasions during two years according to Serran-Pagan, and ultimately filed charges, some numerous times, stating he violated laws that opposed harboring farm animals in the Village. The place would have to be shut down. One of the charges would have resulted in a 15-day jail sentence if Serran-Pagan were convicted. He decided to fight.

Judge Barbara Wilson's decision totally vindicates Gines Serran-Pagan. Her decision notes that where there are conflicting zoning laws, which there clearly are in this case, an ordinance inspector cannot enforce one while ignoring the other. Furthermore, decisions regarding zoning laws must, in general, favor the accused because zoning matters in general conflict with common law. Also, when a homeowner is accused, he must be given adequate warning to correct the zoning violation, which was not done. Further, since the interpretation of the zoning is to be made by the zoning officer, who was, in this the Red Barn Atelier. Later on, they joined about a thousand others in signing petitions supporting Serran-Pagan. Anyway, the complaining neighbor, who is the father-in-law of the Mayor, Joe Romanoski, watched as the police, the zoning enforcement officers, various code inspectors and all sorts of case, John Foster, it is remarkable that in his testimony he agreed that since there are two conflicting ordinances relating to the same matter, the case fell into a "gray area." He also testified that the animals in question did not necessarily fall into the category of animals not permitted, and on another occasion he testified that the animals were not in a fenced area and then later testified that the animals had "escaped from their fenced area." Finally, there was the conflicting ordinance. This stated that any person using his property for agricultural use is entitled, as an incidental accessory use, to raise small numbers of livestock and poultry for personal consumption. The judge's decision wasn't even close. Indeed, from a close reading of it, one could come away with the feeling that she was outraged about what had gone on.

Before this decision came down, by the way, the Mayor decided that rather than wait for what the judge had to say, he would call a Village meeting making a new ordinance to prohibit the raising of small farm animals on small farms.

Serran-Pagan was at this meeting with his lawyer. And the Village Hall was packed with people. In spite of the fact that numerous people testified that the new proposed ordinance seemed exclusively directed at Serran-Pagan, and in spite of the fact that the meeting went on for over an hour, Serran-Pagan was given only 5 minutes to speak. As for his lawyer, he was given 5 minutes too.

Finally, before the matter went to a vote, a local resident who said he was an attorney got up and said what they were doing was illegally passing a law with a single person or group in mind. After he sat down, the Village passed the ordinance, banning livestock in the village on agricultural parcels less than 1.5 acres. I don't have to tell you that the Red Barn Atalier is on less than 1.5 acres.

Many who attended this meeting say that the Mayor and his in-laws exhibited the worst sort of racial behavior, consistently mispronouncing Mr. Serran-Pagan's name, calling him "Mr. Pagan" as in barbarian, or "Mr. Pig On" as in who-knows-what. They continued to do so in spite of being repeatedly corrected. On another occasion at this meeting, the Mayor, Mr. Joe Romanoski, said the following: "I went over there one day because the pigs had gotten out, but (Serran-Pagan) was out of town. And the gentleman who answered the door said 'No Speekie la inglese.' So I pointed to the pigs, and he said 'oh the porkies' and I said, 'yeah, the porkies - they run away.'"

That whoever this person was couldn't speak English well was apparently another affront he did not wish to have to endure, and who would?

Fortunately, or unfortunately for the Mayor (and for the taxpayers), the entire meeting was videotaped by Academy Award-winning documentary filmmaker Barbara Koppel, who is doing a mini-series about the Hamptons, which will be on ABC next spring.

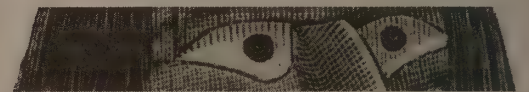

I say unfortunately for the taxpayers not only because of the embarrassment this causes the community, having this go on, but because Serran-Pagan has put the Village on notice that he intends to file a lawsuit against the Village and also against the Mayor personally for harassment and violation of his civil rights.

On the other hand, Serran-Pagan says he doesn't want money. Anything that comes his way, he says, will go toward the creation of a public animal farm for the residents of the community. So what this all may turn out to be is the Village buying an animal farm - with great amounts of peripheral legal expenses to create it.

I also would like to note that three of the four neighbors of Serran-Pagan side with him. (One of them stated she often eats outside on her patio - what was the problem?) People have stated that the presence of the Red Barn is surely a disruption to that part of town and that the people living alongside him must have to take the brunt of whatever it means to live next to a small farm, but then - why is there only one complainant, the Mayor's father-in-law, out of four immediate neighbors?

Baseball

York Mets on Friday night before 41,234 flag waving fans at Shea Stadium, the first to be played at Shea since the disaster.

The tragedy at the World Trade Center, as you know, stopped all sporting events, including the National Pastime, for seven days. On Tuesday, September 18, though, it was decided by the Commissioner of Baseball that the time had come to move on. The first games of the revived season would be played at a dozen stadiums across the country. The Mets would play their first three games at Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh.

Frankly, through the beginning of August, it had not been much of a season for the New York Mets, who last year won the National League pennant. Although they began the season with high hopes, by the All-Star break they were in such disarray, having played so poorly, that most sports commentators had written off their chances. They were struggling in fifth place in the six team eastern division, and had lost more games than they had won.

Then, however, around August 14, something seemed to click into place. Like a favored thoroughbred lounging at the back of the pack, they started to advance, passing team after team in front of them in what seemed like an impossible winning streak that headed them toward the front. By September 11, they were 8 1/2 games behind the Atlanta Braves. With 23 games to go it still seemed an impossible task to catch up. But the Amazings, as they are sometimes known, have pulled off Miracles before.

Before that first game in Pittsburgh, the Mets asked for and got permission to wear baseball caps that, instead of saying NY on them, said NYPD or NYFD. They won that first game. Then they announced they would wear them from then on, that the Commissioner would have to have them ripped off their heads. And they beat Pittsburgh two more times. Returning to Shea Stadium, therefore, they found themselves just 5 1/2 games behind first place because the league leader, Atlanta, had lost three while they were winning three. And guess who they would play the next three at Shea against? Atlanta. Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

On Thursday afternoon, four of the Mets, Todd Zeile, Robin Ventura, John Franco and Al Leiter visited Ground Zero and climbed to the platform atop Ladder #10 to see the devastation. They were moved to tears.

Friday night, after the whole park sang God Bless America along with Diana Ross, accompanied by the Northport High School Choir and Christ's Tabernacle Choir of Brooklyn, a Marine Corps honor guard fired a 21 gun salute and pop star Marc Anthony sang the national anthem. Then, as the bagpipes of the New York Police Department Pipers played "Amazing Grace," several members of the Mets and the Braves, standing next to one another on the infield, broke down and cried, then hugged one another. Members of four city agencies simultaneously threw out first balls, and then as the crowd waved flags and shouted USA, USA, Mayor Giuliani, sitting behind home plate, was introduced by the master of ceremonies over the P. A. system and the fans gave him a standing ovation. After the sixth inning, Liza Minnelli came out and, with members of the police and fire departments behind her, sang to the crowd, "New York, New York."

As far as the game went, Atlanta went out in front early, but then, in the bottom of the eighth inning, Mike Piazza, the star of the Mets, hit a game winning home run, a monster of a drive, over the center field fence and into the TV camera stationed there at the back of the bleachers. The Mets were now down only 3 1/2 games. And the crowd of 41,234 left Shea singing, over and over, "America the Beautiful."

It was one of those weekends, here in the Hamptons, and there in New York City. God Bless America.

Strategic Investments

Invest In The Future

By Muriel Siebert

We need a special investment tax credit for all capital expenditures from Wednesday September 12th, forward, in order to help jump-start the economy. Increased capital expenditures by corporations will provide employment and increase productivity. If spending on production capacity increases, the economy will benefit.

The federal government introduced the Investment Tax Credit in 1962 and it was in effect until repealed by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. It provided a credit, generally 10% of the qualifying capital expenditures, directly against the purchaser's Federal Income Tax Liability. Thus if a new telephone system was purchased for $1,000,000, the taxpaying business could deduct $100,000 directly from its tax bill.

With the economic forecasts of recession and the devastating effect of the World Trade Center and Pentagon attacks on the stock market, we need now, more than ever, incentives for American business to make capital investments and create jobs.

Encouragement of business to make capital expenditures and to retain and hire employees is one of the best and most effective steps we can take to shore up the economy.

he seems to be just about everywhere. He is showing foreign dignitaries ground zero. He is praising the firemen. He is telling people what they can and cannot do. He is the spirit of the City.

Early on, he was almost killed in the disaster, although it took nearly a week before anyone really knew. The plane hit the first Twin Tower, and Giuliani raced down to the scene, setting up a command post in the American Express building across the street. Less than an hour later, while he was manning the phones with several other people, the first of the Towers collapsed, the crash across the street sending everyone to the floor. Dust, smoke and debris came into the room. And the people inside, gasping and coughing, struggled to the basement where they found exit doors locked. They returned to the first floor and in the haze were led through a back entrance to safety. And Giuliani didn't even talk about it.

There are people who say that Giuliani should be appointed by George Bush as his disaster control czar. But there are others who say that at this point he is so idolized by the grateful people of this city that he should stay on as Mayor, even after the time he is scheduled to retire next January.

In one plan, the election is pushed back a year and he serves until the crisis passes. In other plan, the State laws that prohibit him from running for Mayor again this November are repealed by Governor Pataki. He runs and most if not all of the announced candidates step aside, and he wins and serves another term.

My hat is off to this incredible Mayor. My fondest hope is that we find a way for him to stay on. • their full support was echoed throughout the show.

Just a little something to make you smile and perhaps be a little envious. We all know that a little perk to attending charity events out here is the gift bag at the end of the evening. It sometimes resembles a small Christmas stocking... jammed with goodies. Well, it seems to really matter who you are as opposed to where you go. To make sure the special guests, who were nominated, for the Emmy's came to the event, they would receive a little gift bag. And are you ready for this...an 18-karat gold and diamond ladies watch ($4,600), a Nokia wireless phone ($800), a $3,500 gift certificate to Bergdorf Goodman and two 16-oz. Strip steaks. Hmmm our favorite gift bag has always been one from a charity event held at our good buddy Marty Richards' house...but say Marty, check that out!

review: scenery

By Jan Silver

The new comedy, Scenery, is a slight and sometimes touching backstage duel between veteran actors married to each other. It is having a world premiere run at the John Drew Theater, East Hampton, with two very accomplished actors who are not married to each other — Marilyn Sokol and Clive Revill — but the play feels tailored to their many talents.

The story involves the "curse of aging" and whether two self-centered, insecure, alcoholic theater stars' long-term marriage is one of convenience or genuine affection and compatibility. The two characters, Marion (Ms. Sokol) and Richard Crane (Mr. Revill), first appear as affected and two-dimensional, but as the play progresses, they begin to show real feelings.

Playwright Ed Dixon, an accomplished actor and experienced theater writer, says the dialogue is a composite of backstage conversations he has heard over the years. He includes a lot of theater lore, tradition and superstition, such as actors never calling a Shakespearian play by its title, plus actors' views on producers, other actors, and the audience.

The action takes place in the Cranes' joint dressing room on opening night. They are emoting and cataloguing the pitfalls of their profession and the infidelities in their marriage. (They both prefer younger men.) When they are about to come to blows, they have an unusual way of diffusing an argument. As they chip away at one another's pretentious facades, a great affection and interdependence is revealed.

Sokol and Revill work well together. This is an actors' play, so they get to display their polished timing, dramatic acting and musical theater voices. They both have a long list of theater, movie and television credits. He is a two-time Tony Award nominee for the musicals Irma La Douce and Fagin in Oliver!. She has both Obie (Off Broadway) and Emmy (television) awards and was recently on Broadway in Grease.

Noted British director Frank Dunlop allows the actors their star turns here, stopping just short of melodrama and satire. Carrie Robbins creates a colorful, versatile dressing room set and flamboyant costumes for their onstage/offstage characters. Jason Cina does a fine job of lighting all the nooks and crannies of the dressing room, and Ray Gobes Jr.'s sound design adds to the comedy. Christine Catti is production stage manager.

Scenery debuts on the John Drew Theater stage thanks to Montauk Theatre Productions' executive director William K. Brown Jr. as producer and Steven Sendor as associate producer. The show plays Thursday through Saturday evenings with weekend matinees through October 7. For tickets ($30), call Montauk Theatre Productions at (631) 668-5656.

I am dazed. I am not alone - all New Yorkers and I assume all Americans, are also dazed, as this tragedy has put a glaze on all of us. I have also come to realize that we in New York seem to now take for granted this new state of emergency - evacuations, bomb scares, soldiers in the streets. Our lives have changed but at least we are alive. My prayers go out to all those who have suffered and we just have to keep praising those valiant rescue workers. The social events you see below occurred before the tragedy.

We watched Pete Sampras make a gallant effort throughout the Open and into the finals. The overwhelming majority of fans were looking for the new "old man" of tennis to go all the way. The dream fell short but the journey was exciting. The USTA threw a party at the Open Finals and there were lots of celebrities who gave the event the advantage.

BIKE CHALLENGE 2001

Two weeks ago over 50 dedicated people were heroes in the fight against hate crimes and HIV/AIDS. Due to the terrorist attack on the World Trade Center, what was originally planned as a bicycle ride from South Street Seaport to Southampton College, instead originated in Huntington. Over Two Hundred Thousand dollars was raised by the cyclists, who each needed to raise a minimum of $1,000 to register. The money goes to LIAAC, Bailey House and BiasHELP. UBS Paine Webber became the first-ever corporate team and sponsored ten cyclists. The finish was quite moving as many of the cyclists made speeches with references to the disaster at the W.T.C. and Lee Greenwood's "God Bless The USA" was played.

Dan's North Fork

By Janet Berg

Best known as a singer of the New York avant-rock group, the Golden Palominos, with drummer-producer Anton Fier during the mid-nineties, Lori Carson has recently settled in a country home on the North Fork. Lori, who has performed at large theaters in Paris and London, just finished a summer series at the intimate Belle's Café in Westhampton's Gabreski Airport. Now, she's facing the dichotomy of mixing her creativity and marketing her music. To her, it's like mixing oil and water.

Her accomplishments include solo records: "Shelter" (1990); "Where it Goes" (1995); "Everything I Touch Runs Wild" (1997); and "Stars" (1999). And her songs have appeared in many films and television shows, such as Stealing Beauty, Waking the Dead, Gone in 60 Seconds, Roswell, Party of Five, Buffy the Vampire Slayer and Dawson's Creek. She has also written and performed songs for feature films, Strange Days, Broken Vessels and the new Disney film, Crazy Beautiful, for which her voice appears throughout the score.

Magazines such as Rolling Stone, Time, People, Entertainment Weekly, Billboard, and The New York Times, etc. carry accolades praising the talent of the 43-year-old green-eyed blonde who can pass for a 25 year-old.

Sitting across the table from Lori, eating a simple grilled cheese sandwich in a local diner, I was aware that she is seeking a less complicated life than the city offered her since 1976 when she moved there before her 18th birthday.

Born and raised by a loving and conservative family in Massapequa, Long Island, at the age of 12, Lori recalls the first time she was impressed with the "big city" while watching an old movie that showed children leaning out of tenement windows. She sighed, "I love New York."

"When I left home, the separation was traumatic for my family and me, but I had to make the break, in order to be myself. I left behind a younger brother and sister. Over the years, my brother, the lawyer, has turned into the "older" brother. He married right out of college and his children are the kids in my life. My sister has always been very pragmatic, smart and worldly. I was the artist," she smiled impishly, "but I wanted to be a rock star."

"I remember the first winter in New York. I didn't have proper shoes or a coat, and I remember literally holding onto the buildings in the wind. I must have weighed about 90 pounds."

She got an apartment on 76th Street, between Central Park West and Columbus, which she describes as a cheap lockup on the 5th floor in a windowless little townhouse, overrun with cockroaches. She took some writing classes at Hunter College and went to the Fashion Institute of Technology art school, as her second love is drawing, but she really wanted to be a musician. "I quit school about three weeks before graduation," she said with the rebellious smile of a teenager. "I thought, 'I'm never gonna need an education. I'm an artist.'"

"A teacher asked me to pose for the photography classes, and then a student brought one of the photos

"I quit school three weeks before graduation. I thought, 'I'm never gonna need an education. I'm an artist.'" to a model agency in New York, and I worked as a model for awhile, but I never made much money; I was too short and whatever. So I did some waitressing and supported myself.

"Although terrified, I began writing songs and played at open mike nights in Greenwich Village, where there was this great songwriter's scene, with Shawn Colvin, Suzanne Vega, and the guy from The Smithereens. My first 'paying' gig was at a place called 'Folk City.'"

She then reminisced how, as a child, she would write stories and songs and hit the piano keys. "It's the church of 'song.' There's something magical about them. The fact that people can remember songs and want to hear them again and again – you know you're connected to something bigger."

Lori works best in the mornings . . . "Hmmm with my cup of coffee," she breathes; "I can work 10 hours straight without looking up. I start with the germ of an idea, the stream of consciousness, and hopefully, it leads to something more internal and builds from there. I think, 'Could this be a chorus?' 'Is this a first line?' 'What am I writing here?' 'What does the music suggest to me?' 'What does the music feel like?' 'Do I want to use this as an opportunity to express what I'm thinking about lately?'"

Ms. Carson reiterated that the business end is tough, and that talent can play a small part. "It's all about how 'sellable' you are."

In rural surroundings, she and musician boyfriend, Layng Martine produced the new disc "House in the Weeds," and are about to embark on a national tour. Part of her tour includes playing on October 21 at a place in New York called "Tonic," owned by musician John Zorn.

When you listen to the private, clear whispers of her acoustic guitar and voice, you think if you turn suddenly enough, you'll find her standing behind you. Sounding much like Sara McLachlan and Suzanne Vega, she subtly brings you inward to her own world that tried to wear her down.

Lori brings a very human quality to her performances. "They are never the same," she admits, comparing it to today's newscasters. "How can their eye contact be so persistent, and their tone always stay the same? And their hair be that neat?" she giggled. "I've never been that consistent three weeks in my entire life."

As far as her future in music is concerned, Lori compares it to her approach to life. "I don't think it's a bad thing not to know what's next. I realize now, life doesn't go in a straight line, but our psyches are our blueprints, a combination of chemistry, a reaction to our families, and we meet the world, and we think it's 'will,'" she mocked.

Then she finished her simple sandwich and wiped her mouth, and smiled at me, thoughtfully, and headed back to her country home, and I headed back to mine. I popped her CD "Stars" (1999) into the player and listened to the lyrics of the song "Treasures" . . . "these everyday days feel like treasures . . . in the morning I won't hide from the light . . ." I thought, "this girl is a natural."

It feels like it has been a year, but it's only been two weeks since a promise was made to give you further details of what is shaping up to be a formidable vintage here on the East End. The weather has been cooperative and hopes remain high among the area's winemakers that this will be a year to fill the winecellar.

"The fruit is in good shape at this time. We are busy dropping fruit as the vineyards go through veraison, netting and so on. We are keeping a close eye on the weather and are hoping for a dry September to carry us through to harvest," said Tom Drozd, winemaker at Palmer Vineyards in Aquabogue.

Juan Esteban Sepulveda, general manager of Laurel Lake Vineyards, said, "The quality of our grapes at veraison is extremely healthy this year and they are tasting good. Weather permitting, we should have a good vintage all around."

Jamesport Vineyards' co-owner and vineyard manager Ron Goerler, Jr. said, "The vineyards look exceptional. The growing season got off with a cool spring, with moderate amounts of rain. In mid-July, it was dry, with temperatures in the upper 80s during the day, which are ideal growing conditions. Due to the drier weather, we have smaller numbers of berries and are expecting to have more intense flavors in them. There's been very little disease pressure this season. It reminds me of 1998, which ended up, in my opinion, one of the best vintages on Long Island."

Bernard Ramis, vineyard manager at Galluccio Estate Vineyards in Cutchogue, reports that due to "hot days, balmy nights and plenty of sun, their crop is bountiful and the grapes are ripening beautifully. This year's harvest is looking like it's going to be one of the best ever."

Castello di Borghese/Hargrave Vineyard's vineyard manager Mark Terry is also happy with '01 so far. "Although the reds did not bloom evenly, resulting in a loss of about 10% of the crop, this smaller crop should be good as the lower yield potentially improves the quality of the grapes," he said. Owner Marco Borghese commented, "This year's harvest is looking like it's going to be one of the best ever."

"We've had a really good growing season so far this year," said Kip Bedell, general manager and winemaker at Bedell Cellars. "Things are very clean and there's a light fruit load, set up nicely as the grapes come into the ripening period. All we need is a month or so of good sunshine to see us through."

Dan's North Fork

Conversations With John Ross Matching Wine With Food

Many people learned the pleasures of pairing wine and food at my old restaurant (much of it Long Island wine and food). Part of it is psychological and part of it is physical. A couple would come in, order a roast Long Island duck for dinner and a bottle of Merlot to go with it. If all went well they loved the food, the wine, even each other. On the way home they would stop and buy a bottle of that wine they had discovered. Next week they would drink it at home in front of the TV with a frozen dinner. "You know, this wine doesn't taste as good as I remember it from the restaurant. And this food isn't very good either."

Wine is best enjoyed when consumed with food. Wine is not a cocktail and it is not a thirst quencher. Historically for many centuries it has been an accompaniment to food. If you drink wine with your dinner every night you don't really need any "rules" of matching the proper wine with the proper food. Most likely it comes to you intuitively.

But if you are an occasional wine drinker who is perplexed by the many wine varieties, the wide spread in prices and lots of conflicting information, here are a few pointers from a food and wine lover.

1. Match the wine and food with the occasion. An aged, estate bottled wine should accompany some serious food - rack of lamb, osso bucco or poached sole. A simple take-home chicken dinner warrants a simpler, inexpensive wine.

2. If you are dining with four or more people, always have two different wine. I used to be surprised in the restaurant to see a large party order two of three bottles of the same wine. Try to avoid starting a meal with a big blockbuster wine. Start with something lighter, just as you usually start a meal with an appetizer. Move into the heavier wine and food.

THE NORTH

3. Balance the wine and food. The wine should not overpower the food and the food should not overpower the wine. Sometimes this means selecting wine to complement food flavors such as a buttery, oaked Chardonnay with lobster and drawn butter. Sometimes, though, it means contrasting wine and food flavors such as grilled chicken with tomato salsa and gewurztraminer.

4. Decide who is the "star" of the evening. If the wine is the celebrity, then create a dish to show off the wine. You have a delicious Cabernet from the '95 vintage (on Long Island) that you have been saving. What you need is some slow roasted lamb or beef or pork with earthy accompaniments such as mushrooms, shallots, roasted garlic and root vegetables. Stay away from cracked peppercorns and other strong spices. Let the flavors of the wine come through.

If the food is the celebrity, then show it off and serve a wine to enhance it. You just came back from upstate with some venison. You have it butchered into chops and marinated in red wine, onions and rosemary. You grill them and serve with wild rice and braised red cabbage. The wine - big and bold red wine. It can be young with lots of tannins and acidity. It will make the food a star.

Finally, taste, texture and appearance are the criteria for creating good food. These apply to wine also. Enjoy your imagination and don't be afraid to use it. Experiment with the great varieties of wine and food that exist - especially on the North Fork.

The following recipe is parsed from the Summer

Fruits: Complimentary Food and Wine Pairing Booklet produced by the Long Island Wine Council.

Ross' Oyster Croustades

Yield: 24 small appetizers

- 24 Peconic Bay oysters, shucked with liquid
- 1 cup Pellegrini Vineyards Chardonnay
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1/2 teaspoon celery salt
- 1/2 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/2 cup chili sauce
- 1/4 cup reduced oyster liquid
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce
- 1 teaspoon Tabasco
- 1/2 cup sour cream

1. Add oysters, their juice and wine to saucepan. Cook until oysters curl. Remove oysters and reduce liquid to 1/4 cup.

2. Melt butter and add paprika, celery salt, pepper. Stir in oysters.

3. Combine chili sauce, oyster liquid, Worcestershire and Tabasco. Add to oysters and heat.

4. Fold in sour cream and spoon into croustades. Croustades:

- 1. Cut 24, 3-inch rounds, of soft commercial bread with cookie cutter.
- 2. Butter small muffin tins with melted butter.
- 3. Press bread rounds into muffin tins and bake at 400-degrees for about five minutes.
- 4. Remove and cool.

What to drink:

Serve Pellegrini Vineyards' 1999 Chardonnay with the oysters because of the great balance of acidity and fruit in the wine. You will notice the spice of the oysters to be slightly mellowed by the pear-apple flavors of the chardonnay.

Dan's North Fork

Dining On The North Fork: Critic's Choice

Bay & Main. Set back from the street in a Stirling Square 19th century carriage house, this newcomer is fast becoming a restaurant for East Enders to plan their evenings around. Owner Cathleen McCarthy and chef Chris Patteson, ex-of Bistro Blue, have fashioned a very warm and welcoming place with a menu of unending delights. Crabcakes with jicama coleslaw and cilantro remoulade display the chef's knack of turning the ordinary into something exceptional. Inventive martinis and margaritas. Entrees $15-$24. 300 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 7/6/01).

Coeur des Vignes. Outstanding classic French cuisine in a charming timber-beamed house of relaxed elegance. Chef Ari Pavlou's foie gras with papaya, pepper corns, pomegranate and peach schnapps recently honored by Sante magazine's cooking with spirits competition. Perennial Wine Spectator Award of Excellence winner. Escargots cooked in parsley, garlic butter and white wine sauce tops the list of timeless favorites. Fish specialties frequently fresh from the boat — theirs. Excellent game dishes have similarly acquired. Prix fixe dinners provide excellent value. Entrees $18-$31. (Bradbrook).

Ile de Beaute. Returning to this restaurant is like returning to France itself. The cooking style is firmly fixed in the Provence region. French onion soup is inspired, one of the best of its kind anywhere. High standard of cooking in dishes like scallops with saffron sauce on a bed of leeks, chicken breast stuffed with lobster meat in champagne sauce, frog legs and baked stuff clams served with a light Provencal sauce. Delightful desserts. Wonderful range of crepes. Live music on weekends. Entrees $20-$32. 314 Main Street, Greenport. (Bradbrook, 9/7/01).

The Seafood Barge. Derved reputation among the elite seafood restaurants on Long Island. Owner / manager team of Dick Ehrlich and Betsy Flinn ensure every plate served adheres to a very high standard, made possible by twin talents in the kitchen: Executive chef Jim Slatery, sushi chef David Huang. Menu highlights include mussels sauteed with garlic and shallots, tomato concasse, tarragon, white wine and cream; shelled lobster pot pie with baby vegetables, crispy duck breast and leg confit in a peach / apple reduction. Desserts range from restrained to decadent. Wine list, heavy on local vintages is a Wine Spectator "New Award Winner." Panoramic views of Peconic Bay complete a very pretty picture. Rt. 25, Southold. Entrees $24-$32. (Bradbrook, 8/3/01).

Cooperage Inn. Chefs Liamo and Hegeman carry the banner of North Fork cuisine. Freshness of local ingredients evident in every bite, produce comes from neighboring farmstands. Inspired appetizers, topped by pan-seared fresh mozzarella over spinach with artichoke hearts and plum tomatoes. Homemade dressings enliven fresh salads, notably the house salad of greens, fruits, raisins and nuts. Superb steaks and pastas. Rigatoni ala vodka with pancetta, basil and sage, particularly noteworthy. Cornmeal encrusted Atlantic salmon attains a very high level. Excellent values include grilled double pork chops atop wild mushroom herb stuffing. Owner Jonathan Perkins' stylish country restaurant is a North Fork gem. Entrees $14-$30. Sound Ave. Baiting Hollow. (Simm, 6/29/01).

Do Little's. Very welcoming and unpretentious. An excellent menu for diners interested in fresh, smartly prepared dishes that are not calorically trumped up. Thai mussels in ginger/lemongrass broth hit the mark. Excellent pasta dishes, headlined by justifiably famous Seafood Pasta in white wine sauce, filled with mussels, clams and shrimp over linguine with fresh tomatoes and spinach. Stuffed ravioli with sundried tomatoes and mozzarella is beautifully done. Sensibly priced wine list, with a knowing nod to local vintages. Entrees, $12.95-$19.95. Rt. 25, Mattituck Plaza, Mattituck. (Bradbrook, 7/28/01).

La Plage. Obscure geography, sensational cuisine. This sums up owner / chef Wayne Wadington's destination restaurant on Long Island Sound, north of the tiny village of Wading River. No expense spared in the acquisition of top ingredients, local or otherwise. Complex recipes spell highly creative fusion cuisine: New American in heart, French in spirit. Many highlights include: Chilled lobster soup garnished with roe; salad of tart apples with bleu cheese, walnuts and mache; rare yellowfin tuna with homemade potato chips; caramelized jumbo sea scallops with snow crab fritter. Desserts are imaginative and exceptionally well executed. Entrees $17-$28. (Bradbrook, 8/4/00).

Modern Snack Bar. Family owned and operated since 1950, by the Wittmeier family. Don't expect virtuosity, that's not the point. Kitchen delivers plate after plate of likeable, unpretentious dishes. Old stand-bys are given casually perfect preparation. Of particular note, sauerbraten with red cabbage and potato dumplings, soft-shelled jumbo crabs and stuffed Long Island duckling. Snack Bar is all about comfort food that is capable of disarming the sophisticated foodie. Two menu items are flat-out remarkable: the adroitly concocted lobster salad is a delight in every bite, while mashed turnips prove irresistible. Route 25, Aquebogue. (Ballot, 5/1/98.)

Touch of Venice. Simplicity, freshness, flavor are the hallmarks here. Named appropriately for cuisine, location on the banks of Mattituck Inlet and an intricate wall mural dominating the dining room. Proprietor Ettore Pennach shares the cooking with son Brian. Among kitchen's highlights: Stuffed artichoke, eggplant Sorrentino, filet mignon au jus, with garlic and mushrooms. Lobster Meat, a frequent special, is an exciting dish of imaginative complexity. It combines chunks of lobster on a bed of al dente spaghetti with fresh seasonal vegetables topped with basil oil and lemon juice. Entrees $12-$21. Wickham Ave., Mattituck. (Bradbrook, 8/4/00).

First Signs Of Green At Laurel Links

What a few weeks ago looked a cross between the desert and a lunar landscape at the site of the new Laurel Links Golf & Country Club is all of a sudden taking on a hue of greenness. The flow of what will soon be immaculate fairways is visible and teams of workers are busy laying sod around the bunkers and approaches to the greens.

As I toured the site with Kelly Blake Moran, the course designer, he reflected on what had been accomplished, "So far we have seeded 14 holes and 7 greens and this work will continue until about mid October. After that time we will not sow seed but we will continue to complete the placement of sod because that will still take as long as we are free from frost. Any seeding which isn't finished will be restarted in the spring."

On this visit I also had the chance to talk to Kenny Edwards, who has been responsible for the physical shaping of the land to comply with Kelly's designs. Kenny got his start in the golf course shaping business in 1971 when he returned from service in Vietnam where he was trained as an interpreter, although he confessed that his Vietnamese is a little rusty now. Kenny has graded golf courses in many parts of the world, from Japan to Jamaica and Italy to South America. He and Kelly met up when they were reshaping some of the holes on the Red course at Doral and he was very enthusiastic about the prospects for Laurel Links. "Kelly has brought a totally new vision to this project," he told me, "There is such a natural continuity about the course which is going to make it one which people will love to play." While I was there, Kenny was maneuvering his earth grader with great delicacy around what will be a green next year.

Greens do not just happen as Kelly explained, "The whole course layout is drawn out in fine detail so that

(SEMI-PRIVATE & PUBLIC COURSES)

The 17th hole at Long Island National Golf Club in Riverhead has been voted the Best 17th Hole on any Public Golf Course on Long Island's East End, by the readers of Dan's Papers.

Par 4 - 473 Yards

An Odyssey Calling for a Pair of Homers

One of the longest par fours in creation, with fiendish design elements cropping up everywhere to thwart efforts to reach the green in regulation. There are two bends in the fairway, which has enough undulations to provide every fairway lie known to man. Large bunkers zealously guard both landing areas, and greater mishits require a fescue rescue. The elevated green is well obscured by a 100-yard long swale in the fairway. There's plenty of room to miss long, but don't get any ideas. You may need to putt past the 15th's flagstick, as you're on a 50-yard deep double green.

Links (Continued from page 48)

the grader knows exactly what we are looking for. The greens are very carefully mapped with elevation dimensions down to a tenth of a foot and it is the skill of someone like Kenny who can take this and reproduce exactly what has been drawn." Kenny explained that today he uses a laser system which projects a flat beam and enables him to grade a green with less help and produce more accurate end results. Even for such a skilled operator and the most up to date equipment it still takes a full day to shape a green. As I said goodbye to Kenny, I commented how nice it was to see the grass growing, but Kenny told me that he is very much a dirt person. For him there is nothing more visually satisfying than a beautifully graded area waiting to become a green!

Talking with Kelly about the thought processes which go into the design of a green and its relationship to the flow of the hole and the need to cater for a wide variety of golfing skills really brought to life something which most of us take for granted. Next time you play, particularly on a course you know well, take some time to study the layout of the green and see if you can visualize what the designer had in mind. Kelly explained that a significant feature of his design philosophy is that golfers should not be allowed to relax just because they have hit a green. His designs are strong on the risks and rewards that accrue from accurate placement of your approach shots relative to the pin placement.

When the course is completed, the course designer produces a manual of recommended pin positions to meet various situations such as wind and weather conditions, or tournaments such as a club championship.

This will help the Course Superintendent set up the course each day.

Watching the construction of this course over the last few months has really brought home the immense planning and expertise that has to go into such a project. Cardo Excavation of Quogue, Briarcliffe Sod from Peconic and Irrigation Systems of Maine are among the major companies involved and Laurel Links has acted as the general contractor.

So now comes the time when the course will go into hibernation but a close watch will be kept on it over the winter by Bill Shuford, the Course Superintendent, and his team. Bill was most recently the Head Superintendent at Indian Hills and before that was an assistant at Atlantic. Kelly explained that this is also the transitional time when the design and course building are virtually complete and from then on the key factors are to groom lush fairways and to manicure greens.

Next spring, we will revisit Laurel Links to see how winter has treated the new course and to carry on with the story of "How to Build a Golf Course"

- Roy Bradbrook

The Best 16th Hole

(SEMI-PRIVATE & PUBLIC COURSES)

as selected by Long Island golfers

The 16th hole at Island's End Golf & Country Club in Greenport has been voted the Best 16th Hole on any Public Golf Course on Long Island's East End, by the readers of Dan's Papers.

Par 3- 210 Yards Sound Strategy

A hole which every golf course in America would love to have. This long par three allows your eye to trace the North Fork's cliffs for miles. You can't bluff your way to the green, however. In spring and autumn when the wind blows from the north, you have little choice but to send your shot on a high wire act over the Sound and pray that the wind and a bit of draw will prevent your ball from being shipwrecked. Somewhat overlooked is the mini-ravine occurring midway to the hole. Carry it successfully and the landing area beyond is safe. It's possible, but unlikely to hit a run-up onto the green, as the hole is all downhill. To do this, hit a sharp, cutting fairway wood, as the right side is occupied by six bunkers

Shop 'til You Drop... With Maria Tennariello

It's pretty hard getting back to normal here at Dan's and on the shopping circuit. I've had some calls from some of the shops out here in the Hamptons that are donating part of their sales proceeds to the World Trade Center disaster fund. Stay tuned...

The merchants of Main Street in West Hampton Beach are having their "3rd Annual Sidewalk Sale" this weekend, September 29 and September 30, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. The sale that has been spearheaded by Elyse Richman of Shock/Shock Kids says they are all looking forward to the success this event. The merchants want to thank their customers for a great season and to let everyone know many of the shops are open all year round. This sale has a special importance related to the tragedies on September 11. Part of the proceeds from this sale will be donated to the American Red Cross, so everyone should go to West Hampton Beach and support your community. See you there! For information call 288-3337.

Located in New York City on Greenwich Avenue and on Main Street in Southampton, Gallery Eclectic's jewelry designer, Catherine Angiel, is donating a percentage of the proceeds from their annual fall sale to the United Way September 11 Fund.

On North Sea Road in Southampton, English Country Home Outlet has everything on sale. There is a large selection of upholstered furniture in stock and much more.

Check it out.

At Architrove, on Montauk Highway in East Hampton, look for unique and eclectic lighting: sconces and chandeliers, tables, mirrors and fireplace accessories.

Time to get going I have a hair appointment with Arline's Salon In Motion...What a way to end the day. Arline pulls into my driveway, (by appointment only), and does her thing...She has a RV complete with hair station, sink, hair dryers, manicure and pedicure stations and can even make you a cup of java. Call Arline at 369-3434 or 516-652-1047 for an appointment. Check it out, it's the coolest...

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Fall Shopping!

THE THINKING 17-YEAR OLD: MUSIC

By Gabe Rattiner

Not many bands are catching the ears of young music lovers in the first years of the new millennium. In fact, with the new possibilities created by technology, along with the excessive ruggedness or softness of new music, the local teenage garage band is far from trendy. Today's breed of music is appetizing to the ear, with smooth beats, rumpin bass hits and phat rhymes. Who can complain? But is there a lack of meaning to these new tracks? Or are my misconceptions the downfall of my listening pleasure?

The popularity of rap culture has hit an all time high in modern USA, and it should. The sound has style, attitude, and probably most important, the ability to be as straightforward as humanly possible. Ironically, those same qualities are disliked by many who remain rap-free. I have noticed something in my few years, surrounded by the wall-shaking bass and clever electronic beeps: many of the songs share common themes. These songs consist of money, sex and massive amounts of four letter words. So what's the problem? What do we really need besides money sex and the occasional four-letter word? Seems pretty sharp to me, with one exception. Where is the depth? Do these songs have some deeper meaning? Or do I simply connect to them through ordinary human activity? Many people believe what makes a song great is its ability to evoke certain emotions. I also believe this. If metal can make you jump, ballads can make you cry or a country tune can inspire you to watch The Good, The Bad and The Ugly, then that's got to be a damn good song. But, if DMX can get you off the couch and "Party Up," does that mean depth actually exists?

In my opinion, rap has two faces. For example: pop groups like N'Sync and The Backstreet Boys have great singers, but respected they are not. The groups are comprised of five or six crotch grabbing twenty-year old heartthrobs eyeing down the populace of teenage girls. The songs are corny mixes of half-witted clichés and catchy melodies. Don't get me wrong. They do have talent, but they also squash any notion of self-thought put into these new age-oozing pop tunes. Rap isn't exactly The Backstreet Boys, but there is a definite parallel.

I was... was, a DMX fan. His music had enough aggression in it to help me gain some confidence, and at times, put me in a mindset where even my older brother was afraid of me. That is, until the day I actually sat down and listened to what he was saying. Before that fateful evening, I could only catch glimpses of what his songs were about. Even the songs I memorized, I really didn't analyze. "I see what I'm able to see, because my vision is good." This line hit me like a brick wall. I listened to it again, surely big D was not at fault and did not just say that, "vision is good." I was heart-broken. My rising idol and guiding light was, well, shall we say, Captain Obvious. I sat farther back in my chair that night than any other, realizing then and there that big DMX would only rhyme about drugs, money, sex, and growing up... without money, and lots of drugs and sex. I really have no problem with this, but it is not creative. It no longer felt like an attitude as much as it felt like the new kid in school who won't stop ranting about how cool he was back in his old school, or how cool he is at the moment.

Now I know I have fallen into the deep pit called opinion, but what I have said above is from the heart, disagreement is loved, and in fact, asked for. As long as The Roots, Deltron 3030, Outkast, Jurassic 5 and a whole CD case full of new and meaningful rap hits the young musically-guided minds of the coming generation, I say rock is dead. But if you're interested in some of the world's most meaningful music, get your hands on some Radiohead, Deftones and the thought provoking music of Tool. These bands, for me at least, have no grave.

I just heard a '50s song on an "oldie" station with the lyrics, "Spring little Cobra...we're goin' shut them down." For the life of me, I don't know the name of the song. Anyway, it made me think that at one time, there were lots of songs about cars. I certainly remember the lyrics, "Till daddy took the T-Bird away," and, "Whooh, whooh, my little GTO." In the song "Surf City," the Beach Boys sang, "I've got a '49 Ford and I call it a Woody," and who can forget the line, "I took my Chevy to the levee but the levee was dry," from "Bye Bye Miss American Pie."

The simple fact of the matter is that cars are not as much fun as they were in the old days. Take for example the folding windshields on the early MGs and Austin Heals. These wind-in-the-face devices would turn these little roadsters into four-wheel motorcycles. Many of the early sports cars, like the Jaguar XK-120s, the MG-TC, TD and TF as well as the MG-A, Austin Healy 100 and Porsche Speedster didn't even have roll-up glass side windows. They all had what was called,"side curtains." They were simple plastic windows that fitted into slots on top of the doors. The downside to them was that they leaked in the rain, and whistled in the wind. The upside is that with no glass in the door, the doors were very light and some of the convertible roof designs were creative because

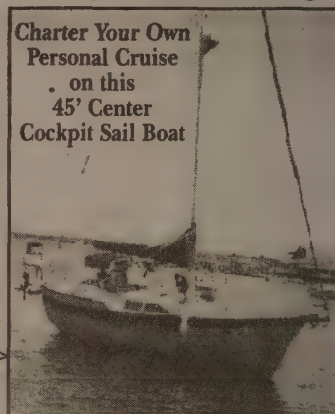

The older cars were also quirky. Today, every automobile manufacturer tries with all their might to delete any quirkiness from their cars. According to automotive marketing gospel, quirkiness in any form is bad: Could that be the reason most of the new cars being produced today are boring and look like pea pods. Perhaps, like the film "Invasion of the Body Snatchers," pods from outer space have invaded earth, but instead of taking over humans, they've taken over automobile bodies.

I often wonder if the "geniuses" running the automobile factories of the world remember that some of the biggest selling cars of all time had many quirks. The Model T Ford, the Volkswagen Beetle, the Citroen 2CV and the Austin Mini to name a few. Quirkiness adds character. The only light I see at the end of the tunnel is in the form of the Chrysler PT Cruiser, the new Ford Thunderbird and the new Mini-Cooper debuting next year. These cars are all retro in style, and that's a good thing.

Some of the features of the old sports cars were quite memorable. Wire wheels that you removed by smashing them with a heavy mallet. There was usually a large "undo" written on the hub, to make sure you pounded the wheel in the right direction. All Jaguars had Lucas electric fuel pumps that worked sporadically. And you know it was Jaguar who invented the intermittent windshield wiper. Porsches and Volkswagens had heating systems that, to put it bluntly, stank. They were unable to heat the vehicle and, if any oil leaked from the valve cover into the heating box, the car

ARTS AND CRAFTS AT GAYLE WILLSON AND CELADON GALLERIES

Gayle Willson's new show in Southampton is a visual wonderland, as usual, where you know that every time you step inside the place, sensuality reigns. The gallery recalls the childhood experience of entering a candy store, overflowing with sights, sounds, tastes and textures.

Ed Batcheller's illuminated assemblages with photo images fit right in with the arresting art, clothing and crafts that the gallery has long featured. Mr. Batcheller's work is most unusual, too, evoking the real and unreal through the senses. His layering technique gives an ambiguity to the pieces, where the abstract and objective merge and then separate again.

A favorite is his "Elegy #1 Morning" which somehow reminds this critic of the cemetery in Prague's old Jewish section. Mr. Batcheller's images are more pleasant, suggesting the way his gravestones overlap. In reality, the Prague graves are also overlapping, but distressingly so: many have become dislodged and fallen on the ground, one atop another or scattered on the grass. We would like to remember Mr. Batcheller's "Elegy" instead (although it was not based on the Prague cemetery).

Celadon is a new clay gallery in Watermill, and its proximity to the Watermill Museum itself and the pond makes the space all the more inviting. Organized by the Clay Art Guild of the Hamptons, members use diverse techniques and materials, including Shino Glaze that derives from Japan's Seventeenth Century.

The current show, "The Bowl - Infinite Form," is just as varied. Consider Nancy Robbins' delicate tea bowls and her larger porcelain bowls possessing a distinct red luster.

Then there are Toni Ross' shino glaze bowls, containing a "thick, buttery" texture. Cati Van Milders' process of making hand-rolled porcelain bowls was described by potter Patti Carbone Wellon as "like working with cream cheese." Fran Schwartz's vessel is hand-built and quite decorative compared to the other bowls.

Raku is another technique that some of the potters use to good effect, including Marsha Lipsitz' hand-made bowl.

It appears as if Celadon is a vital, important place where potters can work in its new studio (available in the late fall), conduct workshops and show their work.

It is a place that is long overdue in the Hamptons.

The show, "Undercurrent," will be on view at the Gayle Willson Gallery until Oct. 1. "The Bowl - Infinite Form" will be at Celadon (631-725-4604) until Sept. 30.

HONORING THE ARTIST: DANIEL POLLERA

This week's cover by Daniel Pollera, "Island Rocker, Block Island," brings back treasured moments for the artist as it must for anyone who's familiar with this typical, indigenous setting. "This is a nice time of year," Mr. Pollera remarks, "when we're approaching fall, and we can see the sparkling bay."

"Living in Southold is important to me. The area takes on different moods for the seasons. I have an intimate relationship with the neighborhood. It's just you and nature. And the light is phenomenal. It reminds me of an ad for Starbucks coffee: 'Racing towards the irresistible spot on the porch in the cozy carmel sunlight of fall.' If I could describe my work, that would be it."

Never mind using an ad to mirror his own sentiments.

Mr. Pollera does very well by himself, expressing thoughts in succinct terms. For example, when asked how his art has changed over the years, he puts it this way: "I always felt strongly about what I was painting when I was younger, but now my painting tools are developed. They can express what I feel."

Mr. Pollera seems very disciplined regarding such development. "I have a game plan, before I start," he remarks. "I paint everyday; I do it like some people exercise."

Mr. Pollera's artistic development, however, didn't start until he was forty years old. "I was in the family business," he volunteers. "But I left it to paint full-time. This is what I was meant to do."

The artist's rapid rise has led to pure pleasure regarding his posters and limited editions. They can literally be seen all over the country (the posters) or in the Northeast (limited editions). Mr. Pollera is currently preparing for a show at Garden City's Saks Fifth Avenue which will feature these limited edition prints, posters and original paintings like "Island Rocker."

It's apparent that Mr. Pollera's life is anything but dull or slow-paced. We ask what he does for relaxation. Without hesitation, he responds, "Going to the places that I have painted, absorbing the experience of being there."

Viewers must feel the same way when they look at one of Mr. Pollera's paintings.

Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Pollera opened his show with over 200 people in attendance at Saks Fifth Avenue, Garden City on September 21. Call Coastal Publications for information about Mr. Pollera's work (516- 867-1641)

Redefining The Portrait

After graduating with a BFA from Hofstra University, Frank Lekstutis led a kind of Bohemian lifestyle, hanging out with other young artists and embracing creativity. Then, like most of us, he realized he had to make a living. He ventured into graphic design around 1980 and as an art studio manager was part of a seven-person team that got Perrier launched by designing logos and packages. When "everything went computer," as Frank puts it, he was "in a state of shock." With his steady hands and advanced technical ability with a brush he felt he could "beat the computer." He freelanced around, working on accounts such as Jello and Depends, and came to terms with the fact that he had to get computer savvy. At NYU he studied multi media and started to build websites. Frank was still working on selected design projects when a friend at the Nassau County Museum of Art asked him to volunteer an idea for the museum's charity event ball; the theme of the ball was PopArt. He set up a display titled "Mona by the Yard," which consists of variations of the Mona Lisa as small prints. He also created sample portraits of some of the board of directors, one of which is part of the museum's permanent collection. These digitally painted, idealized portraits appealed to the guests at the event and so Frank took their photos to design portraits for them as well.

Put "high contrast images, Easter egg colors, dot patterns with shadows, tight cropping....do all these things together and you say Andy Warhol!" Frank says. Warhol came up with a process of silk-screening that was kind to people's faces. By using contrast, that aged, wrinkled look disappeared. Frank felt he could utilize this process and do it better with Photoshop...and so emerged his style of portrait creation combining elements of PopArt and making his subjects appear as Byzantine images, stylized and glamorous. Color is essential in his work and his palette is inspired by Vermeer. By doing a color analysis of Vermeer's paintings, reading books on the artist and reading Dali's notes on Vermeer, he figured out how to use Vermeer's palette on the computer. He also uses many of Vermeer's atmospheric concepts. Not every area in a Vermeer painting is completely in focus, giving a softer element. In Frank's portraits certain areas of the face are given a softer look, using highlights to give a 3D appearance. He changes the outline of the face to help people "lose their gravity," as he calls it. The eye is able to move around the piece, since he uses curved perspective, making it more visually engaging. He will often put more than one image on a canvas, creating a patchwork pattern, known as the Sibonacci Sequence. This is a process of clustering to make the piece more dynamic.

Frank's portraits are highly customized. He will work with the color scheme in a customer's home, take into consideration how young the person would like to look and work with photographs that person has given to him. Most of his paintings are about three square feet in size and his largest pieces are 18 square feet. He specializes in faces, but is actually working on a portrait of a poodle at the moment and is considering doing more pet portraits.

Frank's work can be seen locally at AE Gallery in East Hampton and his work is also displayed at Ariel in Locust Valley, NY and at Revelations in Chester, NJ. His website, www.Lekstutis.com/Portraits, has just been updated and he is currently working out of a studio in Wainscott.

Come in to see our newest books and toys.

As we continue to process the events of September 11 and prepare to wage a new type of war, the performing and literary arts offer some solace and joy. Two new comedies, Gross Points playing in Sag Harbor and Scenery in East Hampton, will bring smiles. The Southampton library invites all to an old-fashioned country dance on Friday with musician Jim Turner and his Superstrings band, and the Southampton Historical Museum joins the Cultural Center and the Parrish Art Museum for a Fall Family Festival on Saturday afternoon. The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center presents Ailey II, the younger members of the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater, next Wednesday evening.

This is the Bridgehampton Historical Society's Road Rallye weekend, so expect to see vintage and classic sports cars on back roads and Montauk Highway. Greenport has its Maritime Festival this weekend, and there is a big "Art with a Heart" auction/cocktail party/jazz performance for the Bridgehampton Childcare Center, Have-A-Heart Community Trust and the NYC Police & Firemen's families at Club Colette, Southampton, on Saturday.

THEATER

This is the last weekend to see the amusing send-up of an over-inflated superstar and the entertainment industry, Gross Points, at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor. The comedy stars Alec Baldwin. Performances are Wednesday through Sunday. Call the box office at (631) 725-9500 for tickets.

Another new comedy concerning an ongoing backstage feud between a famous actor husband and wife, Scenery, just opened at the John Drew Theater, Guild Hall, East Hampton. Written by actor Ed Dixon and produced by Montauk Theatre Productions, the play stars Marilyn Sokol and Clive Revill. Performances are Thursday through Sunday. For tickets ($30) Montauk Theatre Productions (631-668-5656).

MUSIC AND DANCE

Southampton's Rogers Memorial Library is hosting a country dance with music from Jim Turner and his Superstrings band on Friday, 7 p.m., in the Morris Meeting Room. Everyone is invited to dance or just enjoy the music. A $5 donation is suggested; please call the library at (631) 287-1931 to let them know you will be attending.

Take Five 2001 with Jan Silver

Ailey II, the most gifted students from Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater's school, will perform at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center next Wednesday evening, October 3, at 8 p.m. They will dance selected work from a wide range of modern choreographers including Ailey, Talley Beatty, Judith Jamison, Lar Lubovitch and Donald Byrd. Call WHBPAC at (631) 288-1500 for tickets ($19, $27).

FILM

The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center screens recent, notable international films on fall, winter and spring weekends. This Friday through Sunday, there will be several showings of the black comedy Divided We Fall (English subtitles) by Czech director Jan Hrebejk. Tickets are $7 adults, $5 seniors and students, $2 film society members. Call WHBPAC for screening times at (631) 288-1500.

SPEAKERS

Author Susan Zucotti will talk about the legacy of Pope Pius XII, as explored in her book Under His Very Windows: The Vatican & The Holocaust, on Friday, 8:30 p.m., at the Jewish Center of the Hamptons, East Hampton. The evening is presented in conjunction with the Siena Spirituality Center, and everyone is welcome.

Art historian Sarah Burns will give the Soros Distinguished Lecture on Saturday, 5 p.m. at Southampton's Parrish Art Museum. She will speak about the Museum's outstanding collection of William Merritt Chase's Long Island landscapes.

BookHampton, East Hampton, presents Long Island author David Oser reading from his debut novel Paid

In Full, which explores the devastating effects and repercussions of war. He will be at BookHampton on Saturday at 5:30 p.m.

Canio's Books, Sag Harbor, has novelist Indira Ganesan reading from her critically-praised novels The Journey and Inheritance on Saturday at 6 p.m. Next Friday, October 5 at 6 p.m., Canio's will host an open-mike evening of poetry for peace and healing. Anyone interested in reading—from their own work or an appropriate poem they admire—please call Canio's at (631) 725-4926.

BENEFITS and SPECIAL EVENTS

The Bridge Hampton Historical Society's Vintage Car Road Rallye is two events in one this year—a classic car tour for cars built in 1969 or earlier and a timed rallye for sports cars built in 1953 or earlier. Cars registered for the rallye pick up the schedule and tour information at the Historical Society on Friday. There is an 8 a.m. continental breakfast for tour participants on Saturday, and then departures starting at 9 a.m. from the Society's Corwith House on Main St. Tour cars will cover about 100 miles around the Hamptons, arriving back in time for the 4 p.m. awards party. The sports cars in the rallye will leave for the timed course through back roads in Bridgehampton and Sagaponack between 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. They return between 3 p.m. and 4 p.m. Everyone is invited to the closing party from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m. ($15 donation). Participation for a car and four occupants is $175. For information, call the Society at (631) 537-1088.

The "Art with a Heart" charity auction/cocktail party/jazz performance at Club Colette, Southampton, on Saturday is for the Bridgehampton Child Care and Recreation Center, Have-a-Heart Community Trust Fund and the NYC Police & Fire Widows and Children's Benefit Fund. More than 100 artists' works have been donated including pieces by Picasso, Audubon, deKooning, Whistler, Wyeth and local artists. There's a preview on Friday evening and a silent and live auction at the party on Saturday. Tickets are $75 per person. For information, call (631) 537-0616 or (631) 287-0795.

Two Brilliant Comedies In Greenport

The Wild Thyme Players, a theatre group founded ten years ago by actor/writer Diana Finegold will present A Chip in the Sugar and Bed Among the Lentils, two riveting and riotous comedies by the award-winning British playwright Alan Bennett, author of the Academy Award-winning Madness of King George.

In Bed Among the Lentils, Ms. Finegold joins the ranks of renowned British actress Dame Maggie Smith, in portraying a minister's wife whose life takes a most unexpected turn when forced to confront the truth of her relationship to her husband and her own sexuality.

In A Chip in the Sugar, Bruce Bloom performs a role often played by the author himself - that of a jealous son, highly intelligent but troubled, who is his mother's keeper. Or is she? These two brilliant comedies - at once deeply funny and deeply perceptive - are Alan Bennett at his distinctive best!

A Chip in the Sugar and Bed Among the Lentils will be performed by Ms. Finegold and Bruce Bloom (the same duo who brought us the widely-acclaimed Love Letters in April) at the Greenport Methodist Church on Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. on October 5, 6, 12 and 13. There will also be a matinee performance at 2 p.m. on Sunday, October 7. Tickets are $12, at the door. At the matinee performance, however, seniors may pay $10. For info and reservations, call 477-2549.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Unless you are of Greek or Italian heritage, orzo may be an unfamiliar food. You see it through plastic windows on boxes in the pasta section of your supermarket and it appears to be shaped like rice. Well that's exactly what it is, rice shaped pasta.

While both the Greeks and the Italians use orzo in their cooking there is a conspicuous difference between the Italian and Greek orzo – its size. Greek orzo is larger and where the Italians may use orzo strictly as pasta and perhaps in soup, the Greeks use it in combinations with other foods. For instance, they will add orzo to lightly browned chicken pieces with water and simmer until the chicken is cooked and the orzo absorbs the liquid. Gloria Reilly, a dear friend of Greek ancestry, adds orzo to roasted lamb juices and cooks it with water and tomato paste. It is then served with the roasted lamb. Yum!

In conversation with physical therapist, Fred Ireland of Sports Rehab in Southampton, I was inspired to prepare garides me feta, the classic Greek shrimp and feta cheese, a dish that he and his fiancée prepare with orzo. My files also yielded orzo salad with sweet peppers, feta and black olives,* and orzo with onions and zucchini, contemporary dishes incorporating some of our late summer bounty. I find orzo a most comforting food. And a great choice for a time when comfort is sorely needed.

One last word, my Greek born mother would buy 2-3 pounds of orzo at a time. She spread it on a cookie sheet and toasted it in the oven until golden brown then stored it in a screw-top jar. Toasting the orzo first, thus giving it a nutty flavor, is a very Greek thing.

GARIDES ME FETA

Orzo, the rice-shaped pasta, is added to this favorite Greek classic of shrimp and feta cheese. Be sure to buy the Greek orzo, which is larger than the Italian orzo. Greek orzo is available in one-pound packages at Citarella's in Water Mill.

Serves 6

2 pounds large shrimp, shelled and deveined
Flour for dusting the shrimp
3 tablespoons olive oil
3-4 large shallots, finely chopped
2 large cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 cup orzo, toasted*
2 cups chicken or vegetable broth
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 ripe tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced
1/4 teaspoon dried oregano
1/4 cup finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
2 tablespoons julienne of basil
1/2 pound feta cheese, crumbled

1. Wash and dry the shrimp and dust with flour. Set aside.

2. Heat the oil in a large 12-inch skillet and saute the shallots until tender, about 2 minutes. Add the garlic and cook for 1 minute longer. Push the shallots and garlic to one side of the pan and put in the shrimp in a single layer. Cook for 1 1/2 minutes on each side until they turn pink. With a slotted spoon remove shrimp to a side dish.

3. Put the orzo in the pan with the onion and garlic and stir to mix. Pour on the broth, season with salt and pepper and bring to the edge of a boil. Adjust heat and simmer, with cover ajar, about 7-8 minutes. Add tomato and herbs and gently press into the surface of the liquid. With cover ajar cook for 2-3 minutes longer until orzo is tender. Return the shrimp to the skillet with the feta cheese and stir into the mixture. Remove from heat. The cheese will melt from the heat of the mixture. Serve at once.

ORZO, SALAD WITH SWEET PEPPER, FETA AND BLACK OLIVES

A contemporary dish incorporating some of our late summer bounty.

Serves 10-12 on a buffet

For the pasta

2 tablespoons coarse (kosher) salt for the cooking water
3 cups orzo, toasted*

For the dressing

1 large red bell pepper, trimmed, deseeded and diced
1 bunch scallions rinsed, white and light green parts only, thinly sliced
1 cup cherry tomatoes, rinsed and halved
1/3 cup julienne of basil leaves
1/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1/2 pound feta cheese, crumbled
1 cup Greek black olives pitted and halved

1. Bring 4-5 quarts water to a boil and add salt. Put in orzo all at once, stirring to separate. Return immediately to a boil and cook 10-12 minutes until just tender. Stir occasionally to keep pasta from sticking. Drain under cool running water, and then give the colander a good shake or two before spreading on a clean kitchen towel to absorb excess moisture. Transfer to a large bowl.

2. In a separate bowl, combine diced sweet pepper, scallions, tomatoes and basil. Dress with oil and season with salt and pepper to taste. Toss gently to mix.

3. Add the salad ingredients to the cooked orzo and toss to mix. Add olives and crumbled feta cheese and gently stir into the mixture. Serve at room temperature.

To Prepare Ahead: Follow steps 1-3 up to one day ahead. Refrigerate, covered in a suitable container. Transfer to a serving bowl and serve at room temperature.

ORZO WITH ONION AND ZUCCHINI

A simple, quick cooking and comforting dish.

Serves 4-6

1 cup orzo, toasted*
1 quart water
1 teaspoon coarse salt
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 tablespoon unsalted butter.

2 medium onions, thinly sliced
2 narrow zucchini, scrubbed and grated
1/4 teaspoons freshly grated nutmeg Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper

Preheat oven to 375 degrees

1. Bring water to the boil and add salt. Add orzo and cook at a brisk simmer for about 10-12 minutes until tender. Drain in colander.

2. Meanwhile heat oil and butter in a skillet and saute onions for several minutes, stirring occasionally, until onions are tender but not brown. Add grated zucchini and stir to mix. Season with salt and pepper and saute for two minutes longer.

3. Add the cooked orzo to the skillet over low heat and mix with onions and zucchini. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Stir to mix and serve warm or at room temperature.

* Spread a 1 pound bag of orzo on a cookie sheet and toast in a 350-degree oven for 8-10 minutes to color lightly. Remove from oven and redistribute the orzo then return to the oven to color more evenly, about 4-5 minutes longer. Cool and place in a screw-top jar, store in your cupboard and use as needed.

Gone Fishing

Some sort of dementia must have taken hold of my senses the day that I walked down to the commercial fishing docks looking for a job. A quick look at the men was all it took to see that they earned a living with their hands. They looked strong but not buff, dense and scrappy, like steak eaters and whiskey drinkers. They were the type of guy that could fix a net in 11 below conditions with no gloves. I felt a bit nervous as I watched them effortlessly unload huge boxes full of fish, but I was in pretty good shape so I thought I could handle the job and they must have sensed this. I was candid from the start and I told them that I had no experience but I liked to fish. I also volunteered that I didn't get seasick and, in an effort at levity, that I had recently seen the movie The Perfect Storm and was inspired by it.

They were polite and asked me if I would be willing to come out for a couple days with no pay to learn the job. I agreed to come down the next morning and expected them to tell me to be on the docks at 5 a.m. I was ready for them to say 4 a.m., but when they said to be there at 3 a.m. I had to ask them if they meant it. They did.

I awoke the next morning at 2 a.m. and headed down to start my job aboard the filthy, rusty boat that was equipped with an endless number of pulleys, nets and ropes. There was nothing recreational about this operation; it was manual labor at sea. There was no chit-chat when I arrived and the only sounds were the birds and the water lapping at the hull. Al, the captain, a hulking monster of a man, started the engine at 3:30 and we were off the moment his 17 year-old mate jumped aboard. Al offered a gruff introduction, "This is Kenny. The ***** is late, but he's going to train you. I love him like a son, watch his every move!"

Kenny, a third generation Norwegian fisherman, had the "no big deal" attitude of a tenth grader and he apathetically described my responsibilities. I should mention that I'm dyslexic and suffer from A.D.D. so when he launched into a bunch of technical jargon it made as much sense as neuroscience. Simply put, my mind is its own little "perfect storm" so I knew the only way I was going to learn this stuff was by doing it wrong about ten times in a row.

That first day started out fine, it was exciting when the nets would come aboard full of fish and squid. The work was straightforward, all Kenny and I had to do was wade through the piles of squid on the deck and separate them by size. Things went along like that for awhile and then the boat broke down. The engine didn't completely stop, but there was a loud bang and we had to stop fishing to make repairs. Perhaps it was an omen.

I've never turned a wrench in my life so I was pretty well useless while the engine was repaired. I just sat below and waited for them to finish the work and then we began to limp back to port like a wounded beast. Al and Kenny spent the trip back talking and laughing up in the bridge. I didn't feel too welcome and they didn't seem to be very interested when I tried to tell them a couple jokes. I figured there was some fraternity among fisherman and I hadn't been initiated yet, so I just sat back and waited to get home.

The next morning, 3 a.m. again, to my horror, Kenny wasn't on board and I had to do all the things I was supposed to have learned the day before. Al was less than cordial when I arrived; he might have grunted hello, before poking around for an hour before we left. He told me to cast off the stern line and when I nervously picked up the wrong line I heard the theme for the day, "Not that rope you idiot, the other rope." It wasn't long before he yelled at me to go below and go to sleep.

The four bunks were filthy but I was so tired, having only slept 3 hours out of the past 48, that I didn't care too much. Even with the smell of mildew in the bunk, the constant drone of the engine and the rocking of the boat made it seem all is right in the world. I was, for a short time at least, back in the womb.

It seemed like only a few minutes had passed when I heard, "Get your *** up and get those nets in." Al yelled at me all day long and it didn't seem like I did much right. I spent hours hauling in fish and packing them in boxes. You have to put a layer of ice in, then the fish and then another layer of ice. All the fish gets dumped down into the hole and with all the ropes, nets and heavy boxes of fish all on a rocking boat it's easy to see why commercial fishing is the most dangerous job in America. My muscles were aching by the end of the day.

Even with that said, the madness and confusion of the work, there were wonderful moments to think back on. I mentioned how nice it is to sleep on a boat like so many fishermen before you have done, and there are also the sunrises.

Every morning, except when the fog is as thick as soup, I would watch a gorgeous sunrise. I would put on my boots and walk to the stern and see such a beautiful sight that even the most hardened of criminals would have to appreciate it. There is something about seeing that beauty and knowing that you are about to do dangerous work and that you could die. I would sit there and watch the sun come up over the horizon and just wait for Al to start yelling.

—Jeff Nichols

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

One thing about farmers is they are eternal optimists. For years, LIFB and the farmers have pursued relationships with Long Island grocery stores trying to get them to use Long Island grown products. Back in the early 1980's Suffolk County Legislator Gregory Blass (now a family court judge) sponsored a logo contest with LIFB to find a suitable logo for locally grown products. As a result, the "Grown on LI" logo was born. LIFB had the logo "trademarked" and it is our legal property. The idea of the logo was to help consumers identify Long Island quality grown products and hopefully seek them in the market. Over the years, we have had limited success with identifying Long Island grown products in the grocery stores. There has been more success with the use of the logo at the farmstands, and a number of flower growers and potato farmers have used the logo on their packaging.

Over the years, I had developed a relationship with Tom Cullen, one of the principal family members of King Kullen stores. Tom had expressed his desire to get more Long Island products into his stores. For years they had bought products from our farmers, yet they were not identified as Long Island or locally grown. Two years ago, we had a meeting with the new head of his produce division at the Farm Bureau office. A number of interested farmers were there to discuss the possibility with King Kullen of buying more Long Island produce. Now, after a great deal of patience and change in management, "Grown on LI" products are being promoted at King Kullen supermarkets. The farmers are absolutely delighted to have the opportunity to market their product on Long Island for the use of Long Island consumers. I have always held the belief the best farmland program I know is for farming to be profitable. It appears that King Kullen also holds that belief and wants to further develop the relationship with LIFB and the farmers. It is a win-win situation for all especially our residents who can now get our produce more readily. The produce managers at King Kullen, Joe Forte and Joe Casa, have been tremendous in getting this program off the ground. I also think Tom Cullen has to be praised for his leadership in making the relationship happen. It took some perseverance, but it's happening! Stay tuned.

Planting A Fall Vegetable Garden

Yes, it can be done. Spring is not the sole season for planting. You can successfully grow a thriving vegetable garden in fall with a little hard work.

Although it may be a bit painful, you must first pull out some of the giant plants that you have tenderly nurtured since spring, excluding cherry tomatoes, okra and pole beans if they have healthy foliage. Unless your large-fruited tomato plants are boasting 20-25 good sized fruit, pull them out along with any weeds in your garden. Get rid of these plants. They are most likely damaged by insects and are not fit to compost.

Once you have completed your fall cleaning, you can concentrate on the placement of your new garden. The most important element of placement to consider is sunlight, which all vegetables require; the most popular, tomatoes, peppers, beans, cucumbers and squash (veggies that contain seed) need full sun-eight hours of direct exposure-or they will grow to be spindly with weak stems, will drop blooms and will usually be nonproductive. Those vegetables that do not produce fruit with seeds, such as greens, carrots, turnips, cauliflower and broccoli, will yield in partly shaded locations, but will thrive with full sun exposure. Some gardeners think that growing in partly shaded areas is a good idea, but we should take a hint from the experts...commercial vegetable producers do not shade crops...ever.

It is not a good idea to plant a garden within six feet of shrubs, hedges or trees. Your veggies won't stand a chance when competing for light, water and nutrients with these permanent monsters.

If your new garden site is covered with grass, the grass has to be removed before tillage. Existing grass cannot simply be dug or tilled into your garden soil. No matter how great a job you think you have done, bermuda grass sprigs will exist in your soil and cause you all sorts of problems in the future. You may opt for using chemicals to kill the grass rather than pulling it out. Chemicals that contain glyphosate, such as Kleenup and Roundup will get the job done.

Once the sod is gone you should shovel the garden area to a depth of 10-12 inches. Make sure you shovel first. Rototillers will not penetrate well enough in a new garden area. They can be used after shoveling to mix and loosen soil. Coarse (sharp), washed sand, about one to two inches, and organic matter, about two to three inches, should be added to your soil. You should also add two to three pounds of a slow release fertilizer per 100 square feet. In addition to slow release fertilizer, one tablespoon of ammonium sulfate should be sprinkled around your plants every three weeks. Cattle or horse manures can be used in place of commercial fertilizer at a rate of 60-80 pounds per 100 square feet. Don't ever use fowl manure in the fall.

Now you can thoroughly mix your soil and prepare beds to plant your rows of vegetables. Plant rows 30-36 inches apart, so that when your plants get big you can still move around in your garden. Once you have piled and firmed your planting beds, water the entire area with a sprinkler for a minimum of two hours, then allow it to dry for a few days before planting.

If you are growing peppers and tomatoes, using transplants is the easiest way to go, but keep in mind that if in cell packs or peat pots, their root zones are restricted and they'll need at least two weeks for their root systems to enlarge, ensuring active growth. Daily moisture is crucial during this time; if transplants are not kept moist they will die or be stunted to the point that fruit maturity is delayed. In turn, if roots are given too much water and are soaked rather than moist, the roots will rot and death or stunting will also occur. Daily moisture, keeping rainfall in mind, should be given to each transplant. Depressions or basins can be made around each plant and filled.

Fall vegetable crops are separated into two categories: short-term FT (frost tolerant) veggies and long-term FS (frost-susceptible) veggies. FT vegetables can survive in temperatures below 32 degrees F and include broccoli, beets, cabbage, carrots, Brussel sprouts, cauliflower, collards, garlic, chard, lettuce, kale, onions, mustard, parsley turnips and spinach. FS vegetables will be killed or damaged in temperatures below 32 degrees F and include corn, beans, cantaloupes, eggplants, okra, cucumbers, peppers, peas, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, tomatoes, squash and watermelons. FS veggies should be planted together so that they can be taken out of your garden after dying from the first frost. FT's should be grouped together as well, since they'll remain longer in your garden.

You must also keep in mind the maturity rate of the vegetables you're planting, depending on how late in the fall season you're planting. Quick maturing veggies take 30-60 days, moderate maturing veggies take 60-80 days and slow maturing veggies take 80 days or more. If you want to plant watermelon, an FS, slow maturing veggie, in mid-October, you may want to reconsider.

Once you have selected the veggies you would like for your garden, you may use three techniques for planting seeds; random sowing, furrow planting or seed strips.

Random sowing is generally used to plant leafy vegetables like lettuce. Seeds are sprinkled over the soil and then enough soil is sprinkled over the seeds to properly cover them up. When watering...be careful! Use a small watering can or sprayer because too much water will flood them out of their bed.

When furrow planting, a hoe is used to make a straight furrow in the soil and seeds are planted every few inches in the furrow. The hoe is then used to re-cover the furrow with soil.

Some vegetable seeds, since they are so tiny, like carrot and radish seeds, can be bought on paper seed strips. The strips are stretched out, laid in the furrow and covered up. The paper strips decompose as the seeds sprout.

Transplants simply need to be removed from their containers, placed in a small hole and then their rootballs must be covered with soil.

After your garden is planted, aside from a little weeding, fertilizing and watering (fairly easy maintenance) you can sit back and watch your fall vegetable garden bloom.

Healthy Body, Healty Mind

Mary Buffo opened The Ananda Yoga Center, 20 Hampton Road, Southampton, on May 1st. Ananda is Sanskrit for spiritual bliss or ultimate happiness, reminding us that the goal of yoga is not simply to get in shape, but to connect our physical, emotional, and spiritual selves to find internal peace.

Mary's center offers classes in many traditions, including Kripalu, Sivananda, Anasara, Ashentca, Om, and Integral. She went to school and specialized in Kripalu yoga, which is the form that her center focuses on, while other teachers instruct in their specialized traditions. Although it is beneficial to have a variety of traditions to choose from, Mary reminds us that the instructor has a great deal to do with the student's satisfaction (another reason why Mary has many teachers on staff). A positive teacher/student relationship is important; you must find a teacher who can prompt you to make yoga an internal experience.

Mary suggests that first time students try out different classes and teachers to determine what works for them. For instance, Ashentca yoga is more of a power tradition for athletes, while Kripalu is a very compassionate and conscience based yoga, which focuses on noticing everything you are experiencing physically, emotionally and spiritually.

Mary has been an athlete, a competitive runner, for most of her life. About fifteen years ago she became very sick with Epstein Barr, a virus that attacks the immune system, and it was suggested that she take yoga in order to heal. A vegetarian, she had always had a great deal of respect for the natural world, but life.

Mary also noticed changes in her relationships with other people after beginning yoga. She had become a more peaceful and patient person.

A former mental health worker, she had seen patients treated for mental and emotional problems, but these treatments often ignored the patient's physical body. When she became a certified therapist in the healing practice called Phoenix Rising Yoga, she was, and is, able to help people bridge the relationship between their bodies and what is happening in their lives. An ailing body may represent say an ailing marriage, or frustration at work. "The body is a blueprint of what you're projecting out into the world," she says.

Yoga is for everyone, no matter your age, weight, athletic ability etc. Mary even offers a class for senior citizens once a week. This is her most rewarding class because senior students are more willing to accept yoga as a means of relaxation and peace.

Classes are offered Mon.-Fri. at 9:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. On Sat. at 9:00 and 11 a.m., 5:30 p.m., and on Sun. at 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. The senior citizen class is on Wed. at 4 p.m. Classes are among the most reasonable in the Hamptons; $15 a class for walk-ins and $12 if you buy a class card, so there is no excuse to not make yoga part of your life.

-Amy Johns

never saw her own body as a temple; yoga allowed her to do this. She began to see positive changes in her body almost immediately. Since 95% of all diseases are stress related, yoga is a wonderful preventative method to practice because it greatly reduces stress in your

About Face.....with Annette

GRAY-HAIRED AND LOOKING GREAT!

Going gray gave Chazz Levi a glamorous second career. Four years after she swore off hair dye, she was recruited by a top modeling agency... Ford Modeling Agency.

"I started getting gray hair at eighteen," recalls Levi, who is now forty-five. "I was getting more and more gray. To cover up I started to dye my hair first brown, then red, then blond." Because her hair is straight and she didn't have bangs, new growth was immediately apparent. So finally, on her fortieth birthday, she gave up the bottle.

The result? "Even my husband says I'm better looking this way," says Levi. While fame has not turned Levi's head, she does make a point of investing in a terrific haircut. Without it, she insists, a woman with gray hair is either too reminiscent of a hippie chick or witch!

Letting your now gray locks grow in can be real traumatic. Some women, rather than opting for dying it a pale silver blond, just decide they will whether the transformation naturally. Personally I would prefer using one of the non-permanent hair colors like Loving Care to ease into this. But what if your hair was a deep shade of brown covering your gray? I suggest getting your hair cut as short as possible. Removing as much as possible of the tinted ends will help tremendously. I know, I know...cutting that hair is like taking away the security blanket of a toddler. So cruel, but it will grow no doubt the standard 1/4 to 1/2 inch per month. Funny how it seems to grow so fast between haircuts or when we need a tint job huh?

There are a few products out there now specifically made for gray hair that are absolutely gorgeous. Perhaps they can help ease you into 'taking the plunge.' A careful home regimen will keep hair healthy and supple. Gray hair tends to lose luster which can make the hair appear flat, so I recommend a battery of deep conditioners, leave-in lotions, and silicone-based anti-frizz solutions. Shine products will counteract that 'flat-look'. To counteract the hair's tendency to turn yellow, a violet-hued color-enhancing shampoo will help. For extra contrast ask your hairdresser about lowlights. The opposite of highlights, they emphasize silver and gray by darkening select strands of hair. Some good violet-hued color-enhancing shampoos and conditioners follow. They work to fight brassiness and eliminate yellow undertones in your gray (and blonde) hair.

•Clairol Shimmer Lights color-enhancing Shampoo and Conditioner.

•Logics Color Refresher Revitalizing Conditioner in Quartz.

•Redken Shades EQ Color Enhancing Shampoo in Platinum Ice.

•KMS Color Vitality Blonde Shampoo.

•Sterling Solutions Silver Bright Volumizing Shampoo, Clarifying Shampoo, Shampoo and Conditioner in One.

Gray hair tends to be more brittle and have less shine than hair with more pigment. A reconstructor or deep moisturizer will help strengthen and revive gray hair, some deep conditioners/shine enhancers you might want to try:

•L'Oreal Color Vive Leave-In Shine Infuser.

•TeraGloss Instant Restorer for Damaged Hair.

•Pantene Pro-V Color Intensive Care Masque.

•KMS Color Vitality Reconstructor.

•Bumble and Bumble Styling Lotion.

One to Look Out For: L'Oreal Gray Chic. This is a semi-permanent hair color that helps brighten up gray hair. Gray Chic, which lasts up to twenty-eight shampoos. It comes in seven shades of gray.

Not ready to go gray just yet? Consultants at the Clairol Institute (1-800-223-5800) suggest that callers select dyes that are one shade lighter than their natural color. For partial coverage, try temporary colors. Try these permanent dyes which conceal more gray:

•Clairol Revitalique

•L'Oreal Excellence Creme

•L'Oreal Superior Preference

•Revlon ColorStay Permanent Hair Color, Schwarzkopf In-Salon Professional Hair Color, Igora Royal Permanent Hair Color. Prices vary according to the salon.

Make-up Tips:

To compliment gray hair, you'll probably have to adjust your make-up and clothes. Skin tone changes with age. Women often find their skin looking pale and uneven as they get a little older. The best thing to use is a good, medium coverage foundation, which will even out the skin.

Women with gray hair should have a pop of soft color on their cheeks and lips. They should stick to soft colors that won't wash them out but also won't be quite as harsh as some of the brighter colors we often see on older women. Grays, slates and white for the eyes, offer a sleek and sexy look without too much drama. On the lips and cheeks a woman should stick to three color palettes, rose, pink and peach. These always compliment silver hair. A pretty rose or salmon on the lips always looks wonderful on an older woman.

The best colors to avoid are browns and colors that are too neutral because they tend to wash out the face.

As mentioned above...get the right cut, an up to date cut that works. Graying tresses sometimes grow in more coarse and brittle, so short-medium, which will prevent breakage, is the preferred length. Trims every six to eight weeks will prevent ends from splintering.

I would like at this time to extend my heartfelt sympathies and condolences to those affected by Tuesday's tragic events. I sincerely hope that all of you and your families are safe and well. My thoughts and prayers are with all of the victims and their families, the heroic rescue crews, and everyone touched by these unconscionable acts of evil. I am truly proud of being an New Yorker and most of all....an American. God bless.

POLICE BLOTTER

Kmart of Bridgehampton was the latest victim of the pirating angler. Police were called last Saturday by Bridgehampton Commons security when Rimantas Kimkelis, 45, of Riverhead had gone fishin' and left the store allegedly carrying a fishing pole and tackle box that he hadn't paid for.

Another case of Kmart crime involved two 17 year olds from Sag Harbor. Police were called when mall security witnessed the movie marauders pocketing a DVD each and attempting to leave the store. The boys were each charged with one count of petty larceny.

Carol Shainswit of Water Mill reported to police that a cord of firewood was stolen from her driveway some time in the past week. Police have no suspects in the case of the fagot filcher.

Stan Meyer of New Jersey called police when he discovered two 300-pound bathtubs missing from his half-constructed residence in Noyac. The thieves got away squeaky-clean as police have no suspects as of yet.

Southampton Town Police arrived at the Green Derby last Wednesday night to find 18-year-old Derek Barbanti of Hudson in the parking lot drinking a can of beer. Barbanti was issued an appearance ticket and released at the scene.

A Montauk man was also found to be punk in drubric. Police arrived to find the man sprawled out in the street blocking traffic. He refused medical attention for his bumped head and denied requests by responding officers to go home. He was subsequently arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and obstructing traffic.

Two weeks ago, September 11, Police were called to a Route 104 residence in Riverside to investigate a car break-in. It's hard to believe that on such a dark day someone could break into a resident's Chevy pick-up truck and steal $950 worth of belongings including a radar detector, a cassette player and speakers.

A $250 car stereo, vehicle registration and the insurance papers of Fernando E. Plaza's 1985 Jeep Cherokee were discovered missing last Sunday morning in Springs. Plaza, of Harbor View Drive, had left his truck unlocked the night before. No suspects have been identified yet, but police are still investigating.

According to Edward Carlson, an employee of the Nassau County Police Department, someone broke a window of the home he is building on Hand's Creek Road in East Hampton. Mr. Carlson told investigating police that someone had been using his new house as a restroom. The defecating delinquent(s) has not been identified but police are patrolling the area more frequently.

Police were called to a Sag Harbor residence last Saturday in response to a homeowner's complaint. The man said he had left some items on his front lawn for a friend to pick up. Police reported that sometime between 11 a.m. and 2 p.m. an unknown suspect(s) removed the items, valued at $1600.

"Fahrvergnügen!" That might have been what Colette Clancy was thinking on her way to her car last Sunday morning. But when Ms. Clancy, a Montauk resident, walked out of her house, she found her Volkswagon symbol had been pried from her car while it was parked in her Sanger Place driveway. Police valued the German icon at $50 and have no suspects.

Dan's LETTERS

MINGLING RELIGIOUS SYMBOLS

Dear Dan,

The seed of an idea your (1099- ) article could be the beginning of a movement that brings together the Muslims, Christians and Jews. Our fearless leader could float the idea of making Mecca work toward putting an end to the centuries of killing in the name of God. I, as has the writer, felt that killing in the name of organized religion has gone on too long.

SHAME ON YOU, MR. MAYOR

Dear Dan,

In the midst of a week of horror and sorrow, I went to the Southampton Village meeting to support Gines Serran-Pagan and the Red Barn Atelier. The Red Barn animals are a charming gift to all who visit there. Gines effort to resist a change to the zoning code that will put an end to his animals was met with a level of local animosity that was truly frightening. The opposing neighbors were full of exaggerations and fallacies. The Mayor's attitude was thoroughly unprofessional and venomous as he railed on and on. His in-laws are the loudest critics, which put him in a clearly compromised position. They couldn't make the tiny effort to pronounce his name correctly, even when corrected. All supporters from other than the Village of Southampton were treated like foreigners by the villagers. In light of the clear need for tolerance and peace, the Village meeting was uncharitable and unpleasant. The Mayor and his villagers should be ashamed of themselves.

What They Wanted (What They've Lived) What They Got...

They'd hoped for anarchy
a leader too long in the choosing a people disintegrating, destructing into darkness

What they got a raucous, messy, glorious lesson in a living democracy.

We The People Civics 101

They wanted a people isolated millions of victims alone
paralyzed in their fear

What they got a nation gathered up in the arms of the world in it's mourning

enveloped by shared anger and condemnation

united with the world

We are not alone.

It is a small world, after all.

They had prayed for a people in chaos imploded by their differences inspired by their hate

What they got a diverse nation cemented stronger by the tears and the sweat

and the ashes raining down.

E Pluribus Unum

They have failed.

We prevail.

DRIVING MR. WALLACH

Dear Dan,

Ohhh, Mr.Dan,

You were at the game, weren't you? Of course you were, I saw you, but didn't say hello.

Now to my reason for writing. I'm a born on Long Island gal... still living here in Suffolk Co. (for 65 years, sssshhh). I finally got myself down to 'your East Hampton' ballgame for my first time on June 30th, and I could not have had a better time. Honest, bought stuff...a T-shirt, etc. My timing was a bit off, but what happened to me would not have happened if it weren't.

Eli Wallach was being spotted, and turned to the guy and said, "give me a ride to the house." The guy said no. So, quiet little me, said that I'd be delighted, Mr. Wallach.

Hmmm, again... Eli said to the fellow, "come on, give me a ride home." And again was told No, have HER take you.' So...I jumped in again and said that I was about to leave and that I would not mind. So HE DID. As he was getting into my car, he asked me what my name was.

Funny, my 91-year old, half-blind Dad would have done the same thing that Mr. Wallach did that day.

Mr. Wallach is a joy. We talked, and I felt that I knew him a hundred years.

And that's how Long Island...was.

Oh, I just read your great editorial, about the snobs, and Road Rage... I agree...!

Thanks, Mr. R., It's been fun, talking at ya.

Thanks for the MEMORIES, Mr. D.R.

DAN A COOKIE MONSTER?

Dear Dan,

I just re-read your "Cookie Story" Stealing Food. I think it's the first time I've laughed since Tuesday!

Anytime you want a cookie, please help yourself! I only wish I had known-we had twelve dozen!

DISROYALTY

Dear Dan,

In June of 2001, your newspaper had a picture of an alleged Princess at Hunt Slonem's opening party. Given the variety of imposters that surface from time to time in the Hamptons, you may be interested in knowing that there is no royal family in Eritrea, currently in power or out. This fact can be confirmed by the Eritrean embassy in Washington. (contact Veronica Rentmeesters, email address: veronica@embassyeritria.org)

The "princess" is Naz Tesfit and resides at 8 Shorewood Drive, when in East Hampton, or St. Mary's Residence on E. 72nd St. in NYC.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

HAPPY 50th ANNIVERSARY RICHIE & NORMA CALEDRONE

Richie Caledrone married
Norma Larsen on 9-30-1951. The reception was held in Huntington at The Palm Gardens. He was born in Brooklyn
and raised in South Huntington. She was born and raised in Freeport. They resided in South Huntington where he was a Bricklayer for over 45 years and she was a Homemaker/Dental receptionist. They raised 7 children and have
7 grandchildren. A party was given in their honor at The Huntington Elks, where they were very surprised. They are now happily retired and living in Sag Harbor.

CONGRATULATIONS

The Real Deal. Originally built in 1887, it sports the same architectural features found in the mansions of the Summer Colony—gambrel roof line, beautiful windows, covered porch, and, of course, shingles. The only differences are that it's located on a charming tree lined village lane, and costs a lot less. Four bedrooms, 3 baths, formal dining room, fireplaces in both the great room and the master bedroom, 2 car garage. Plenty of room for a pool. $825,000.
